Stassen Asks Investigation Of All U. S. Food Trading

Wires to Pauley Are Made Public; Halleck, Ferguson Pledge Follow-up

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Harold E. Stassen, candidate for Republican nomination for President, last night demanded "a prompt, thorough investigation of all food market operations of the Government and of all officials and insiders of the Government."

Stassen's demand brought immediate response from two Republican leaders, one in each House, that a prompt investigation would be made.

Stassen, speaking at Doylestown, Pa., made public an exchange of telegrams with Edwin W. Pauley, assistant to Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall.

Stassen said that on November 17 he wired Pauley and asked him if he had speculated in wheat and other commodities during 1947.

Repeats Query

He asked a telegraphic reply at his Minneapolis office.

On November 20, he said, Pauley replied. In his reply Pauley repeated Stassen's wire, and asked:

"Please wire whether this was sent by you, and if so, in what capacity and why."

The following day, Stassen said, he replied that he had sent the wire, and added:

"I sent it in my capacity as a citizen to you as a prominent official in the Government for the purpose of ascertaining the truth."

"To this hour I have received no answer," Stassen asserted.

Stassen further stated that he had written Representative Charles Halleck, Republican House leader, urging an investigation "of the actions of officials and insiders of the Administration in the price situation."

Investigations Pledged

Last night Halleck said Stassen's message had just been received.

"Of course we will look into the whole situation," Halleck said, "and determine what will be done."

Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.), of the Senate War Investigating Committee, declared that his committee "certainly" would institute an immediate investigation of Stassen's charges.

Senator Ferguson, also a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, declared that "now is no time for speculation in the necessities of life. Anything that tends to increase prices does not do the country any good."

"I hope that Mr. Pauley replies with candor and frankness."

Senator Ferguson added that speculation by officials not directly involved in procurement was not illegal but that if any such speculation was going on it raised the question of "propriety under the circumstances."

"I am sure Secretary Royall feels the same way about it," Ferguson declared.

Four Break Out Of Prince Georges County Jail

District police were alerted last night on information four men had broken out of the Prince Georges County Jail at Upper Marlboro, Md., shortly after 10 p. m., after seriously injuring a jail guard.

Instigator of the jail break was identified as William Midgett, 25, imprisoned there for housebreaking and robbery. He was joined in the escape by Joseph Boswell, 31, similarly charged; a Robert Morris, not further identified, and James Hanson, 21, jailed on abduction and rape charges.

The four were reported heading toward Washington.

One Killed, Five Hurt

Radar Lands 2 Planes Safely Here; Another Crashes, Burns

By Charles Yarbrough
Post Reporter

Glazed with ice from a freezing rain, an Andrews Field cargo plane was brought to within 1500 feet of its runway by radar last night befoe it crashed in flames, killing one person and inspiring five othes.

At the same moment National Airport's radar (ground control appoach) bohght one heavily-iced pivate plane in safely and aided another to reach Bolling Field.

The freezing rain, which virtually grounded all commercial aircraft in and about Washington, brought National Airport's ground control approach system into emergency play for the first time.

The Andrews Field twin-engin C-47, the Air Force designation for the DC-3, had been "talked" into its landing run by the GCA operator in the Andrews control unit. In trouble, apparently from ice, the cargo plane lost air speed and with landing gear down hit a mobile radar truck 1500 feet from the runway, smashed into the ground and bounced 1000 feet along the muddy approach before crashing and exploding.

The crash was at 6:25 p. m.

As the cargo-laden craft flared in an explosion, a twin-engined Beechcraft with forward visibility reduced to zero by an iced windshield, was "talked" into National Airport by CAA's senior traffic controller, Joe Vivari, 2605 Lee blvd., Arlington, Va.

Pilot of the plane was 28-year-old Nick Carofanello of Bradford, Pa., pilot for the Sloan & Zook Oil Co. of Bradford.

Carofanello, out of Bradford for National Airport at 3:30 p. m. yesterday under contact conditions (able to see the ground), ran into icing not long after take-off, but climbed above it into heavy rain. As he began his descent toward Washington, his windshield iced over the Pitot tube, which operates the air speed indicator, clogged up and ice jammed his radio receivers.

Watching the dot on the screen, Vivari radioed proper compass directions, altitude and required turns to the stricken plane, following the plane at every move.

"To be perfectly frank," Carofanello said, "it felt pretty good to hear that calm and confident voice of authority coming in on the radio. I followed every move he asked for.

"I was still zero-zero until I got about 200 feet from the runway. Then things began to clear up for me. From then on, getting the plane down was easy."

Shortly after 9 p. m., Vivari's radar screens picked up an Army B-25 bomber 15 miles east of National Airport, brought it in to where the pilot could see Bolling Field and make his landing there.

The pilot radioed for a GCA approach from National's tower. His radio message said he had no

British Warn Jews, Arabs as Deaths Mount

Warfare Overspreads Desert; 18 Smash Out Of Jail; Protest Date Set

Jerusalem, Dec. 10 (AP).—The death toll in 11 days of Holy Land violence climbed to 131 tonight and Sir Alan Cunningham, high commissioner, warned Jews and Arabs that unless the bloodletting ceases "severe measures" would be taken against both communities.

A British police officer and a territorial soldier died from wounds, bringing to 19 the number of deaths reported today. It was one of the worst days of scattered violence since the United Nations decision to partition Palestine.

The Jewish-Arab warfare spread to the southern desert, where 10 deaths were reported. Eighteen Arabs smashed their way out of Acre prison in the Far North.

An Associated Press count of deaths in Palestine included 78 Jews, 6 British and 2 Armenians. The total for the entire Middle East was 245.

(A dispatch from Aden said two Arabs were killed by local police in an attack upon a Jewish shop. This would bring casualties in that Arabian port to 114. The dispatch added that many Jews were leaving the city in the wake of the Jew-Arab strife.)

Representatives of the Arab League held their third session in the current meetings at Cairo for organizing their forces to oppose the U. N. decision on Palestine.

A "Save Palestine Committee" set December 14 for a nation-wide day of demonstration against partition. The marchers will form at Al Azhar Mosque and march to the royal palace, then go to the headquarters of the Arab League, whose representatives from seven Arab nations are in session to consider steps for opposing partition.

(A high government informant said in London the British expected the arrival of the United Nations Commission in Palestine next spring to be "a signal for trouble.")

U. S. Moves To Extradite Film Figures

Bench Warrants Issued to Bring 10 Defendants Here

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The Government moved swiftly yesterday to block efforts by 10 Hollywood figures indicted here for contempt of Congress to fight extradition to Washington for arraignment and trial.

The 10 writers, directors and producers, announced through their attorney, Robert E. Kenny that they will seek California action to halt their scheduled appearance here, December 19.

The indictments were handed down by a District grand jury in record time last week, after evidence was presented showing the 10 had refused to answer a question from the House Committee on Un-American Activities as to whether they were members of the Communist Party.

Eight of the 10 were indicted on a second count because they refused to state whether or not they were members of the Screen Writers Guild.

Bench Warrants Issued

District Attorney George Morris Fay sent out bench warrants to assure the appearance of the 10 here on December 19.

Through their attorney, 9 of the 10 surrendered yesterday afternoon for a hearing before a United Stats Commissioner on extradition here. One Dalton Trumbo, a writer, apparently was not available at the time, but is expected to surrender also when the hearing is called.

Fay said the Government would ask for $2500 bond in each case, and seek to confine the hearing on the question of appearance here to the "usual ground" only of identity of the persons indicted.

In Los Angeles United States District Attorney James M. Carter said his office will "oppose vigorously" any attempt to prevent removal of the Hollywood group to Washington.

In compliance with the request of Attorney General Tom Clark that the cases be handled with all possible speed, the Government

New State Law Invoked

Prince Georges Parents Face Charges in Curfew for Children

A vigorous drive to combat juvenile delinquency in Prince Georges County will result in the court appearance today of parents of 12 teen-aged youngsters picked up under the county's unofficial curfew.

Roy D. Bright, a State probation officer assigned to Prince Georges County, is using a new State law to back up his campaign to keep children off the streets at night.

The law, passed by the Legislature this year, permits charging parents of children found roaming the streets at a late hour with contributing to the delinquency of a minor. The law provides a maximum sentence of two years in prison and a $500 fine.

Bright brought the new law into play over the weekend when Hyattsville police picked up six youngsters, ranging in age from 11 to 15, early Sunday morning in a diner on Baltimore blvd.

The children included three sisters, whose ages were from 11 to 14; two sisters, 14 and 15, and a 14-year-old boy.

Bright had warrants sworn out for the parents. He continued his crackdown yesterday as warrants were served on the parents of six teen-age Riverdale, Md., boys and girls who spent the night in an automobile near Greenbelt last week after the car became mired.

Warrants against one parent of each child were sworn out by Bright, who said a similar charge had been filed against a 19-year-old boy who accompanied the youngsters.

The juveniles involved, three boys and three girls, range in age from 11 to 17.

The teen-agers, object of an intensive serach by their parents, told police they decided to sleep in the automobile when they were unable to get help in dislodging it from the mud. They said the car became stuck after they went for a ride following a party at the Riverdale Teen-Age Club.

Flares Seen Near Wreck Of ATC Plane

29 Military Men Aboard Transport When It Crashed In Labrador Wild

Westover Field, Mass., Dec. 10 (AP).—A big ATC transport plane crashed in midnight darkness with 29 military men aboard in Labrador's icy wilderness just north of Goose Bay, but flares sighted near the wreckage today through a snowstorm gave hope of survivors.

While a rescue party with dogsleds moved overland through the rugged country in a blinding storm, flyers spotted from the air a lone figure waving his arms in the midst of the ruins—and bursts of fire—giving signs of life.

Whether the flares were lighted by the vanguard of the ground rescuers—or by survivors—was not definitely known here.

Efforts to send aid by air were hampered by the storm—but a parachuting doctor and a helicopter were being rushed to Labrador to be dropped at the wreck, 8½ miles north of the Royal Canadian Air Force base at Goose Bay.

The transport—a C-54 Skymaster capable of carrying 40 passengers—crashed within five minutes after taking off from Goose Bay at 11:58 p. m. (EST) last night with a cargo of mail and military equipment for Westover Field.

Aboard, too, were 10 crewmen and 19 other persons officially described only as "military personnel." Whether these included any high-ranking officers was not disclosed.

A report that a light in the sky had been seen at the Goose Bay airfield about the time of the crash raised speculation that the plane might have caught fire before going down.

The temperature was reported near freezing with rain and sleet falling.

The ground rescue party—made up of Canadian and American Air Force personnel—was reported making slow progress through wild forests described as almost impassable.

Maj. Gen. William H. Turner, commander of the Atlantic Division of the ATC, flew to Goose Bay to direct operations.

U. S. Attaches Ditch Plane Over Turkey

Istanbul, Turkey, Dec. 10 (AP).—Four members of the United States Military Attach's office at Bagdad, Iraq, flying from Rome, became lost last night over western Turkey, ditched their C-47 military transport plane and parachuted to safety.

Their fuel supply was almost gone.

Lieut. Col. James F. Coward of Erwin, Tenn., Air Attache at Bagdad, was piloting. He said that his radio was blacked out by bad weather.

The ship flew into the hilly country south of Susigirlk. Two Cocker Spaniels came out of the crash unhurt, Coward said.

Besides Coward, others aboard were: Capt. A. W. McMurray of North Carolina, Sergt. Hugh Willis of Hickory, N. C., and Staff Sergt. Paul A. Barnes, Springfield, Ohio.

Emergency Landing

Fargo, N. Dak., Dec. 10 (AP).—A Northwest Airlines twin-engine Martin 202 made an emergency belly landing in the snow west of the Fargo Airport at 3 p. m. (CST) today. None of the four crew members aboard was injured and damage to the plane was light, an airline official said.

25,000-Word Official Report

Public Welfare in Baltimore Held Encouraging Pauperism

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 10 (Spl.).—A seathing denunciation of Baltimore's public welfare system yesterday was issued by the Commission on Governmental Efficiency and Economy.

The commission has just completed a nine-month study of the City Welfare Department.

The commission's 25,000-word report was formally released by Mayor Thomas D'Alessandro, who has announced that he and Gov. Preston Lane will issue a joint statement later on the sweeping ramifications of the survey.

Among charges leveled at the welfare administration were that "public welfare policies in actual practice condone and in effect encourage dependence upon the Government, idleness, pauperism, desertion, illegitimacy, dishonesty and irresponsibility."

"After 12 years," the report adds, "there is little to show in the way of improved community social values as a result of the public welfare service."

If the department continues to be guided by its present principles and philosophies, the report predicts, "it will grow and its cost increase as time goes on, no matter what general business and employment conditions may be."

Citing as a basic weakness the fact that welfare management is entirely in the hands of social workers, the report recommended that the "department needs a fresh start. If the present executives of the department are unable to give proper weight to sound management principles and business considerations . . . persons of proper qualifications must be brought into the department's administration."

Cited as specific abuses were the fact that the department depends on the "client" to report when he no longer needs aid; does not require its workers to talk to neighbors, policemen and others who might know the client's circumstances; discourages clients from accepting part-time work; discourages mothers from putting their children in day nurseries and working to help support them; takes no active part in trying to locate missing husbands and fathers.

(Raymond Clapp, assistant director of the D. C. Department of Public Welfare, explained that the Washington department requests the client to report when he no longer needs aid, but maintains an independent check on this situation; requires the client to state his circumstances, then obtains factual corroboration of those statements; requires the client to obtain work either full- or part-time except in the case of mothers who cannot make satisfactory arrangements for their children while working; and requires mothers to provide satisfactory evidence they have made all possible efforts to locate missing husbands or fathers, and to obtain their financial assistance.—Editor's Note.)

GOP Enters Rival Bill On Inflation

Measure Presented In House Intended To Spur Voluntary Action by Business

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Republican leadership in Congress yesterday submitted its initial answer to President Truman's anti-inflation program. It took the form of a bill providing:

1. Extension for one year of export controls, which would otherwise expire next February 29.
2. Extension for one year of controls over rail transportation, also expiring February 29.
3. Encouragement—by exemption from anti-trust law prosecutions—to the formation of voluntary agreements by businessmen with the Government for the allocation of scarce materials.
4. Restoration of higher rates of gold reserves which Federal Reserve Banks must hold against deposits of member banks and against currency issues.

Introduced In House

The bill, agreed upon by ranking Republican leaders of both chambers, was introduced in the House last evening by Representative Wolcott (R., Mich.), chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee.

The leaders' plan is to enact the legislation before adjournment of the special session, tentatively set for December 19. No other inflation control legislation is being considered for action before the regular session next January, it was indicated, except possibly a bill to restore curbs on installment buying.

A measure for this purpose was approved yesterday by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee by a vote of 9 to 4. It would reimpose the Federal Reserve Board's "Regulation W," which expired on November 1. In addition, it grants the board more effective enforcement machinery in the form of injunctions and legal proceedings against violators.

Voting against the bill were Republican Senators Bricker (Ohio), Capehart (Ind.), Cain (Wash.) and McCarthy (Wis.).

Declared "Political"

Wolcott said that Mr. Truman's request was purely "political" and that the Administration offered it for that purpose, knowing the powers would not be granted.

It is not desirable in peacetime, he declared, to place in any man's hands the power to change a free economy into a "virtually socialistic" state. We don't have to "borrow from Marx" and install "communistic" measures, he said.

The final phase of Wolcott's bill, relating to the increase of Federal Reserve Banks gold coverage requirements, was directed at the Government's "cheap money policy," Wolcott said. That policy, he asserted, was a major factor in present inflationary difficulties.

The bill would restore the reserve rates in force until 1945. These would require the Federal Reserve Banks to keep gold reserves in the amount of 35 per cent of member banks' deposits, and of 40 per cent of the currency the Federal Reserve Banks issue. The reserve rates are now 25 per cent for both deposits and currency.

This provision, Wolcott declared, "meets head on" an Administration

House Beats 2 Moves To Cut European Aid; Boost Also Rejected

At London Conference

Marshall Demands Russians Stop Stripping German Zone

By Ned Russell

London, Dec. 10 (NYHT).—Secretary of State George C. Marshall demanded at the Council of Foreign Ministers today that Russia halt its program of removing capital assets from eastern Germany and of taking over ownership of various German businesses in the area.

Marshall charged that the Soviet program of stripping eastern Germany's industrial assets and creating "a gigantic Soviet trust" in the zone threatens to wreck the economy not only of Germany but of all Europe.

He insisted on immediate acceptance of his demand. If it was not met, he said, the council was "wasting our time when there is no time to waste."

Marshall announced that the United States would not agree to the payment of reparations from current German production. This is one of the cardinal factors of Soviet economic policy and will come under special discussion by the council later.

Marshall's demand appeared likely to furnish the crisis of this fifth session of the council. Viacheslav M. Molotov, Soviet Foreign Minister, hedged in his reply. He said Marshall's charges were "unfounded" and he would prove it later.

Marshall made his demand in connection with a British proposal that Germany should not have to pay reparations from current production until Germany's economy is balanced and the occupying powers are paid back what they have spent on imports for Germany and on occupation costs.

He insisted that the council decide immediately that, from January 1, 1948, "nothing shall be taken out of Germany except for a fair economic value in money or goods which can be immediately used to sustain the German economy."

He exempted from his demand "agreed reparation deliveries in capital goods," and said the ban should stand until the council revokes it, or until some other arrangement is made in the German peace treaty.

Marshal built up the case for his demand by charging that the Russians are taking assets from eastern Germany at a rate and value which American officials estimate at more than 500 million dollars a year. Additionally, he said, German businesses in the

Truman Urges Caution in Oil Export Ban

President States Views in Letter to Congressman Welch

By The Associated Press

President Truman wants Congress to think it over carefully before taking any action to prohibit shipments of oil abroad. Otherwise, he says, the country "may suffer."

Mr. Truman gave this advice to Chairman Welch (R., Calif.) of the House Public Lands Committee, in a letter made public by Welch yesterday.

Welch and Chairman Butler (R., Nebr.) of the Senate Public Lands Committee joined last week in asking the President to ban oil exports as a means of conserving petroleum reserves at home. In giving reporters a copy of Mr. Truman's reply, Welch said the letter "does not answer the problem."

Mr. Truman wrote:

"Situations such as these have to be approached with extreme caution, as you know, and as the House committee discovered when they began raising a fuss about 22 million dollars worth of goods being shipped to Russia before they knew that we bought 26 million dollars worth of goods from Russia which were indispensable to us.

Suggests "Thorough Look"

"I think you will find the interchange of oil products is practically in the same class, and I'd suggest you give the matter a thorough look before you start to take action for which the country may suffer."

Welch said the request which he and Butler made did not mention oil exports to Russia, but covered exports of 140 million barrels of oil and oil products a year to all foreign countries.

"If we are dependent on Russia for critical materials, God help us," Welch commented.

Navy Will Ask Authorization To Modernize

End to Congressional Limit on Spending To Be Sought Today

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Navy will ask Congress today for authority to modernize its existing warships for war in an atomic age.

Proposed legislation will be submitted to the Senate and House to repeal an existing statutory limit on the amount of money which can be spent on maintenance, overhaul and refitting of ships, the Senate Armed Services Committee disclosed.

The present limit—$450,000 in any 18 months—was decreed by Congress years ago to prevent extensive reconversion of warships without specific congressional authority.

Removal of the restriction would allow the Navy to keep its warships modern, subject to congressional control of the purse strings. Money allowed for such work in the annual appropriations bills would determine what could be done.

Rear Admiral O. S. Colclough, Navy Judge Advocate General, told The Washington Post that one reason for submission of the proposal is increased costs of normal overhaul work.

"The proposal would not permit us to change one type of vessel into an entirely different type," he said. "However, it would enable us to make tremendous changes in ships to keep them up to date, which we cannot do today."

Apparently this would permit the Navy to convert present-type submarines into new-style high-speed submersibles developed by the Germans which can stay under water indefinitely.

It would seem to permit extensive modernization of aircraft carriers to fit them for operation of

Assails Nation's Rulers

Premier Qavam Quits in Iran After Losing Confidence Vote

Tehran, Iran, Dec. 10 (AP).—Premier Ahmed Qavam failed tonight to win sufficient votes in the Iranian Parliament in a test of confidence and in accord with constitutional procedure his resignation became mandatory. The Tehran radio announced he had resigned.

Qavam

He received 48 votes in favor and 39 against when he demanded the vote of confidence. Twenty-seven abstained.

(Apparently under Iran's constitution this was not enough margin for Qavam to retain his premiership.)

Demanding confidence, Qavam accused the three ruling powers in Iran—the Shah, Parliament and cabinet ministers—of intrigue and interference in each other's affairs.

He said that "for the last time" he would tell the Iranians some facts. He said he did not launch an attack on Azerbaijan Province earlier than December, 1946—when it was under a Soviet-favored semiautonomous regime—because "I hadn't any confidence in our army's strength."

He said similar moves for semi-autonomy in Hamadan, Malayer and Mazandar Provinces last spring were halted by his forces. He said 8000 rifles had been distributed in each province, but that antigovernment plots were discovered in time.

Last August and again in October Qavam succeeded in winning votes of confidence in the Parliament. That was before the Parliament on October 22 declared void, over his protest, the understanding he reached with the Russians to permit them to explore for oil in northern Iran.

Later Russia formally charged that the voiding of the agreement was "hostile activity."

GOP Leadership Trips First Time As 90-Million Slash Is Rejected

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The House yesterday drove the 590-million-dollar foreign relief bill to the brink of passage after flatly rejecting two moves to slash the amount of aid.

Tripping the GOP leadership for the first time this session, members voted 147 to 97 against a 90-million-dollar reduction in the already closely cropped committee bill.

House Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck (Ind.) supported the 90-million-dollar cut after voting with an overwhelming 171 to 78 majority against a deeper 300-million-dollar slash.

A leadership-supported move to recess the chamber overnight before testing the lesser reduction was overridden 182 to 72 in another upset.

The House voted to sit it out until the threatened 90-million-dollar cut was disposed of following a dramatic appeal by former Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.), House minority leader.

"I believe our action today speeds war or peace," said Rayburn.

"Can't we afford to do something that might buy peace for the world by spending 590 million dollars?"

Increase Also Rejected

Earlier the House voted even more decisively against raising the amount of aid to 661 million dollars. This was designed to cover the increased cost of the program since the committee added China to the bill.

A motion by Representative Chester E. Merrow (R., N. H.) for the larger figure was turned down 185 to 24. Democratic leaders themselves opposed the Merrow motion on the theory that their best chance of restoring the 67-million-dollar committee cut in western Europe aid will come in conference.

After turning down the GOP leadership's cue to go home for the night, the House rejected not only the expected cut but still another amendment threatening the program.

An authorization permitting the RFC to advance 150 million dollars, to permit quick help to France, Italy and Austria, pending congressional action on the aid appropriation, was retained in the bill by a thundering vote.

Communists Barred

Representative Lawrence H. Smith (R., Wis.), who sponsored the unsuccessful 90-million-dollar cut, said the RFC advance wasn't needed and tried to cut it out.

After saying "No" to Smith, House members quietly agreed to an overnight recess before completing action on the bill today. The House already has spent five full days on the emergency measure. The Senate passed its own uncut and unimpaired version in four.

Two amendments aimed at barring Communist participation in the program, both sponsored by Southern Democrats, were adopted earlier in the day.

One, by Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D., S. C.), would require governments receiving American aid to first certify that no person or organization embracing or formerly embracing communism will distribute or allocate the aid. This was adopted, 109 to 57.

Another, by Representative O. C. Fisher (D., Tex.), stipulates that the President terminate aid to countries embracing communism or policies of the Soviet government. This carried, 78 to 37.

Conference Group Named

Both the House and Senate bills already gave the President authority to terminate aid if changed conditions make it desirable.

Proponents of the program, opposing efforts to legislate rigidly detailed terms and conditions, are expected to try to remove both amendments in conference.

The Senate meanwhile objected in advance to any of the House changes in its own 597-million-dollar aid bill. A Senate conference committee was appointed to iron out differences with the House after

Rodert to Receive Aviation Award

NACA Engineer Wins Collier Trophy For Heat Method to Prevent Icing

Lewis A. Rodert, an engineer with the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics (NACA), will receive the 1946 Robert J. Collier trophy for his work in developing a heat method of protecting aircraft from ice, the National Aeronautic Association announced yesterday.

The trophy, generally recognized as the outstanding aviation award in this country, is conferred for an achievement, "the value of which has been demonstrated by actual use during the preceding year."

Rodert is chief of flight research at the NACA flight propulsion research laboratory at Cleveland, Ohio. The NACA is the Government's aeronautical research agency. Rodert formerly was assigned to laboratories at Langley Field, Va., and Moffett Field, Calif. He is a native of Kansas City, Mo., and 1930 graduate of the University of Minnesota.

President Truman will present the trophy to Rodert at the White House on December 17.

The method of heat protection is known in the industry as thermal de-icing. It operates by conducting hot air along the leading edges of the wings and tail surfaces, preventing the formation of ice. Older methods permitted formation of ice and then broke it off by means of palpitating boots.

The National Aeronautic Association said that all new transport aircraft are incorporating thermal de-icing systems. One of the first new types to use it is the DC-6, including Mr. Truman's personal plane.

NAA announced that the Curtiss-Wright Corp. propeller division was given honorable mention by the Collier Trophy judges for its work in developing reversible propellers, permitting their use as landing brakes. The association said all large new transports and bombers will use such propellers.

By 9 p. m. icing conditions had ceased, CAA reported, and there was 4 miles' visibility with a 900-foot ceiling. Under regulations, National Airport remains operational until visibility is three quarters of a mile and the ceiling is 400 feet.

The GCA system at Andrews Field has been in operation since before end of the war.

Given By Air Forces

National's GCA was given to CAA by the Army Air Forces about a year ago, but has been operational only for the last few months. Maintenance has been CAA's greatest problem, other than getting experienced operators. The radar system has more than 700 tubes.

A rotating "scanner" at the airport picks up an object, throws it on a screen as a "pip." The GCA operator is able to determine exactly where the plane is, its altitude and able to radio directions to bring it to the airport area, avoiding other air traffic enroute.

The pilot blindly follows radioed directions as to degrees of turn, rate of descent—even to when he should lower flaps and landing gear.

National Airport also has the ILE (instrument landing system) which brings planes in on a radio beam, but few planes, outside of some commercial airliners, are equipped to operate on the system.

Towers Successor On Board Named

Vice Admiral Charles H. McMorris of Wetumpka, Ala., has been appointed chairman of the general board of the Navy, succeeding Admiral John H. Towers who retired 10 days ago, it was announced yesterday.

Hangar Destroyed by Fire at Hybla Valley Airport

Hybla Valley Airport Fire Destroys Ashburn's Hangar

Fire swept the main hangar of the Ashburn Flying Service at Hybla Valley Airport early yesterday, destroying nine aircraft. Loss was estimated at between $50,000 and $75,000.

The hangar housed the operations office, stockroom and restaurant in addition to storage and repair space.

The field is about 3 miles south of Alexandria off United States Highway 1.

Fire equipment from Alexandria, Penn Daw, Fort Belvoir, Mount Vernon and Franconia fought the blaze more than an hour, and succeeded in saving the nearby administration building containing virtually all of the field's flying records. About 100 pilot log books were destroyed in the fire, but duplicates will be made from field records.

The blaze, apparently originating in the operations offices, was well under way when discovered shortly after midnight.

Small explosions from plane gas tanks wracked the frame and metal hangar at the height of the blaze and heat was so intense aircraft motors were melted.

W. R. Ashburn, owner of the field which has a long list of students, said loss on the planes would approximate $20,000 while building and equipment losses would run between $40,000 and $55,000.

The school was operating on schedule yesterday morning as workmen began clearing away debris. Ashburn said he plans to rebuild as quickly as possible.

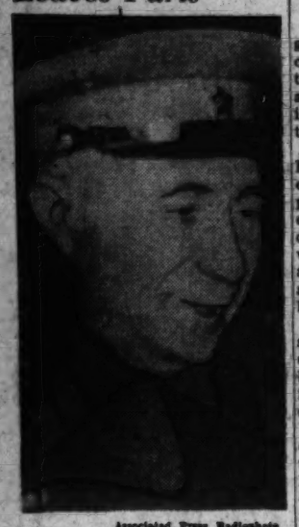
Soviet Protest Note Refused by French

Expelled Russian Leaves Paris



Associated Press Radiophoto
COL. NIKOLAI FILATOV
Starts back to Moscow

Action Intensifies Quarrel; Most Workers on Jobs

Paris, Dec. 10 (AP).—The French government today refused to receive a Soviet protest over the treatment of Russians in France and instructed its charge d'affaires in Moscow to hand the note back to the Russian government.

The action, intensifying a French-Russian quarrel which was expected to be mirrored in the present east-west split in the Foreign Ministers Council in London, came as hundreds of thousands of workers returned to their jobs after a month-long strike wave and France looked forward to labor peace for at least a month.

The cabinet decided the Russian note was "unreceivable" because of its virulent language and because it was made public before it was handed to the French government.

This step followed yesterday's expulsion of the 12 members of the Soviet repatriation mission in France because of "actions prejudicial to French national security."

The Soviet note, which announced the immediate rupture of trade negotiations, protested the expulsion of 19 other Russians on November 25 who were accused by France of "subversive actions" during the strike, and a French police raid on the Soviet repatriation camp of Beauregard on November 14.

In commenting on the Soviet note, authorized government circles said it was "injurious" to France. No foreign government has the right to defend the French people "against alleged maneuvers of their own government," these sources said.

Interior Minister Jules Moch and Labor Minister Daniel Mayer informed the cabinet on the labor situation this morning.

Moch told his collegues, a government source said, that nearly all strikers, who at one time were estimated at nearly three million, had returned to their jobs except the coal miners in the north.

Labor leaders questioned in the coal fields declared the miners would refuse to go back to work as long as "troops are present in the mines."

The strikes were called off by the Communist-dominated General Confederation of Labor (CGT) when it accepted government terms which had been offered 10 days earlier and rejected.

With the end of the strikes, Paris was like a city awakening from a bad dream.

Premier Robert Schuman, who took the reins of government when the strike wave was at its height, broadcast that "we can breathe again."

Declaring he had "not come before you to exult" in a victory over "the spreaders of disorder," he warned that the situation of France was still grave and her food supplies "tragically deficient."

He said the strikers had cost the country more than two million tons of badly needed coal and 400,000 tons of steel and pig iron, and that persons killed in the strikes were the "innocent victims of sabotage . . . committed against the nation."

French Mission Head Assails His Government

Moscow, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Raymond Marquie, chief of the French repatriation mission ordered by the Soviet government to leave Russia, denounced his own government today for "falsely" accusing Russian officers of subversive activities in France.

Marquie, who fought with Polish and Ukranian partisans during the war, told a press conference that "none" of the allegations in French notes to Russia "can be charged against the government or authorities of the Soviet government . . . or can be supported by any proof."

On the other hand, he said, the French government has not furnished him with any facts enabling him to answer Soviet allegations of deeds "tolerated, if not encouraged" by the French government.

Marquie listed French acts directed against Russia as:

1. Hindering or preventing the return to Russia of Soviet citizens in France or French occupation zones.

2. Permitting propaganda hostile to the Soviet Union in displaced persons camps.

3. Delivering "false" documents, such as the one charging Soviet citizens with subversive activities in connection with recent disorders in France.

4. Refusing to return to the Soviet Union Russian citizens accused of war crimes.

Marquie charged there has been "systematic bad faith through successive French governments" in carrying out the 2-year-old Franco-Russian repatriation agreement, canceled yesterday by the Soviet Union.

Two members of his mission left for Paris by train tonight and the other three were to leave on Friday—deadline set by the Soviet government.

Marquie said the mission had repatriated 315,564 Frenchmen, women and children, 21,321 of whom were citizens of Alsace-Lorraine who had been forced into the German army and were captured by the Russians.

"The few who will be left behind will be cared for by Soviet authorities," Marquie said, "but nobody in the French Embassy will take care of them."

Bulgarian Assembly Asks Dimitrov to Take Reins Again

Sofia, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Bulgarian National Assembly today designated Communist Premier Georgi Dimitrov to form a new government under the procedure called for in the new constitution adopted by the National Assembly last week.

Dimitrov will present his new cabinet tomorrow.

Informants said the cabinet would consist of 11 Communists, 4 Agarians, 2 Republican Party members, 2 Socialists and 1 Radical. All parties are in the Fatherland Front, the Communist-dominated coalition that rules Bulgaria. The old cabinet appointed November 22, 1946, had 10 Communists, 5 Agarians, 2 Socialists, 2 from the Zveno group and 1 Independent.

The informants said Dimitrov would name as deputy premier his associate, Traicho Kostov, and would designate Vasil Kolarov, former Communist president of the republic, as foreign minister. Kolarov would replace former Premier Kimon Georgiev.

F. S. Lott Promoted By Bureau of Mines

The Bureau of Mines announced yesterday the appointment of Frederick S. Lott as chief of its petroleum economics division.

Lott, assistant chief for five years, succeeds Alfred G. White, chief of the division since 1936, who will devote full time to forecasts of petroleum demands.

3 Nations Ask Explanation of Polish Arrests

Warsaw, Dec. 10 (AP).—The envoys of three nations called upon the Polish government today to explain the arrests of three of their employes as gradual restrictions of privileges, especially of Anglo-Saxons, appeared to gain headway.

U. S. Ambassador Stanton Griffis said he was making representations to the government on the arrest Saturday of Miss Zofia Michalowska, 36, who has been employed as clerk in American consulates in Warsaw and Krakow.

Belgian Minister Harold Eeman and the Swedish Charge d'Affairs demanded reasons for the detention of two of their employes.

Charges against the three were not immediately disclosed.

Meantime, the Polish Health Ministry has closed Warsaw's leading hospitals to further admission of American and British patients. The ministry, however, has offered another hospital which is not as adequately equipped.

Americans attached to the University of Warsaw in a student or teaching capacity said they were told they cannot invite Anglo-Saxons to Christmas parties this year.

Greece Worse Off, U. S. Official Says

Hint for More Funds Seen in Dour State Department Report

Denver, Dec. 10 (AP).—The economic and military situation in Greece has "deteriorated," a State Department official said today, adding it is "imperative the line be held . . . whatever the cost and no matter how long it takes."

"Our activities there have not yet begun to pay off," George C. McGhee, coordinator of the 300 million dollar American aid program to Greece, told the Rocky Mountain office of the American Association for the United Nations.

McGhee's remarks were interpreted in Washington as another hint that the Administration intends to ask Congress for more funds to extend the American assistance program.

The Greek aid is part of a 400 million dollar fund voted by Congress earlier this year with the avowed objective of bolstering Greece and Turkey against Communist pressures.

Citing the "great strategic value" of the Near East, McGhee said any outside power which could take over the strategic and economic resources of this area, "might well be able to decide the destinies of at least three continents and create dangers to the security of this country that would make the past dangers insignificant in comparison."

McGhee declared that many Near Eastern countries are "peculiarly vulnerable" to outside aggression because of their "heavy economic difficulties."

To back up his contention that conditions in Greece are "still critical," McGhee cited what he called "substantial gains" made by the Communist-led guerilla forces, a severe drought which has cut the wheat crop by one third and a resulting inflation.

Leftists Call Rome Strike Of 500,000

Rome (Thursday), Dec. 11 (AP).—A General strike, the first in the Italian capital since before the advent of fascism 25 years ago, started spreading its creeping paralysis over Rome early today as Premier Alcide de Gasperi's leftist opponents brought their "winter offensive" to his doorstep.

The wheels of the public transportation system ground to a halt just after midnight, and ushered in the "indefinite" work stoppage ordered by leftist-dominated labor unions, ostensibly to enforce a sweeping program of winter relief on De Gasperi's Christian Democratic Government.

Soon after the strike was called, the Christian Democrats' Rome Committee attacked it as a political maneuver, declaring the unions' demands already were largely satisfied, and urging Christian Democrat workmen to remain on the job.

Officials at the Rome Province's Chamber of Labor, however, expressed confidence early today that the entire working population, estimated at 500,000, would obey the strike call. Workers in essential activities have been exempted.

Calling out all workers in industry, commerce and agriculture except a few to keep some skeleton services going, the Provincial Chamber of Labor demanded the earmarking of 10 billion lire ($18,650,000) for a public works program to absorb what it estimated were 80,000 unemployed in the Rome area.

One-sheet newspapers printed by the chamber charged the government had offered only two billion lire for public works, although unofficial reports earlier said the government offered to set aside 11 billion lire for the Rome area out of an over-all appropriation of 40 billion lire for a nation-wide program.

Exempt from the strike call included these employes:

Bakers and millers; employes of food stores; public markets, dairies and popular-priced restaurants; some public utilities employes; some postal and communications employes; hospital, pharmacy and first aid station prsonnel; transport workers hauling milk and food and all railway service employes.

This newest challenge to De Gasperi's centrist government—climaxing a wave of leftist-led strikes, demonstrations in public squares and attacks on government buildings and right-wing party offices throughout Italy—came as the aftermath of the fatal shooting of a 20-year-old unemployed Communist by police in a riot in a Rome suburb last Friday.

Communist labor leaders demanded a huge public works program, a Christmas dole for unemployed, and punishment of the killers.

British-Soviet Pact Advances

LONDON, Dec. 10 (AP).—J. Harold Wilson, president of the British Government's Board of Trade, returned from a five-day trip to Moscow today and an authoritative source said he believed an agreement "in principle" had been reached on a British-Soviet trade pact.

Wilson, who left a staff of experts behind to continue negotiations, refused to make any comment until he appears before Commons later this week.

The authoritative informant said the negotiations "have not run up against any snags or difficulties" because Britain was in a better position now to meet the "delivery and financial conditions" wanted by Russia than was the case several months ago when negotiations fell through.

Britain has been negotiating for a large quantity of Soviet grain in return for industrial machinery.

British Coal Production Hits Seven-Year High

London, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Coal production last week rose to 4,298,700 tons, 33,500 tons more than the previous week and the highest figure reached since 4,313,600 tons were mined in the week of August 24, 1940, the fuel ministry announced last night.

House Beats Moves To Cut Foreign Aid

Senate President Pro Tempore Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) said there is "ample precedent" for asking a conference in advance of House passage of a bill.

The House approved these additional amendments:

By Representative Monroe M. Redden (D., N. C.), authorizing the Speaker and Senate President to name joint committees to "observe and advise" on relief distribution. Adopted, 87 to 47.

By Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.) requiring recipient governments to distribute to poor people "their fair share of food supplies." Approved, voice vote.

By Representative Harris Ellsworth (R., Oreg.) saying nothing in the bill could be construed as giving the President domestic price, production or allocation controls. Approved, voice vote.

Knocked out on a point of order was an amendment by Representative August H. Anderson (R., Minn.) to put the Red Cross and other private relief organization in charge of distributing two thirds of the food.

Also defeated on a parliamentary point was a proposal by Representative Ralph W. Gwinn (R., N. Y.) to bar payment of more than $3 a bushel for wheat used for foreign relief.

Another, by Representative Reid Murray (R., Wis.), which would have knocked out authority for a national food conservation committee, was rejected, 108 to 47.

The attempted 300-million-dollar slash in the program was sponsored by Representative Bartel J. Jonkman (R., Mich.). In the day's biggest surprise, Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.), highly touted as a convert to foreign aid, supported the cut and reverted to his long-time isolationist stand.

Assailing the long-range Marshall Plan as well as interim aid, Short said he had decided that "friendship which is purchased is not to be trusted." Charging the aid measure is "neither a relief bill or a war measure . . . but a blanket delegation of power," he said America should put its faith in a strong defense."

Almost the entire Republican side came up cheering as he finished. Representative Harold Knutson (R., Minn.), who shares Short's isolationist views, tried to get him 10 minutes' more speaking time. When Representative Mary T. Norton (D., N. Y.) objected, Short turned to the rostrum and shouted:

"Mr. Chairman, I do not care to cast my pearls before swine."

Later, Short received an answer from his own side of the aisle. Representative John Davis Lodge (R., Conn.) took exception to the Missourian's conclusions and said:

"We are in this world whether we pass this measure or not."

Lodge said "Communists all over the world will rejoice" if the aid bill is cut.

Rayburn also told the House he "deeply regretted" Short's remarks. The Texan called on members to follow instead the Foreign Affairs Committee's studied recommendations and reject the 90-million-dollar slash.

"That might be the difference as to whether some sections of this earth already in chaos go further into it," he said.

End Looting, Soviet Told

Soviet zone are being brought under Soviet ownership by various means and are being placed "in a gigantic Soviet trust."

German manpower, he added, also is being taken out of productive effort either through forcible seizure of "under the color of contracts which are imposed."

"Thus, in effect," he said, "much of German economy operates for Soviet account."

If this situation is not corrected immediately, Marshall warned, the German economy most probably would be so wrecked that its dead weight will drag down and submerge the economy of all Europe."

He said such reparations could not be tolerated because they could be met only if the United States were prepared to pay them or by depressing the German living standard to such a point that Germany would become a center of unrest and would retard its own rehabilitation of Germany and that of Europe.

Marshall also warned that the United States would reject any Soviet move to make reparations from current production the price of German unity.

"Europe, including Germany," the Secretary said, "is in a critical economic state. What we do here should be related to that reality. We should not confine ourselves to what will be quite academic unless Europe surmounts the grave economic difficulties which press upon her."

Information Refused

As today's meeting opened, Marshall also rapped Molotov for his refusal to furnish statistical economic data about the Soviet zone of Germany. Molotov quoted yesterday from a state department announcement to attack Anglo-American price policies for Ruhr coal.

Marshall said that Molotov was pressing for four-power negotiations to make Germany an economic whole and at the same time was refusing to divulge any information about the economy of the Soviet zone. Molotov said yesterday that he would furnish information after the principles were accepted.

"I cannot perceive any justification for withholding by the Soviet government of information which I consider necessary to the serious consideration of the matter," the secretary said. "Such an attitude obviously tends to make our discussion here very unreal. We must know what we are dealing with."

Stassen Asks Market Probe

Bennet E. Meyers were cited by Ferguson as an example of a legal activity which was not appropriate under the circumstances.

Among a series of charges of laxity on the part of the Administration in its dealings in grain and other commodities, Stassen told his audience:

"I charge that insiders in the National Administration have engaged in profiteering in food which has raised the price of food to the American people."

Stassen's charges came a day after the Senate Appropriations Committee had started an investigation into rumors of speculation by Army officials.

Asks Inventory Control

In a sensational move at the close of Tuesday's hearing, Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) asked Army Secretary Royall if any investigation had been made of speculation by his subordinates.

Royall declared he would ask an immediate statement from all "officials or employes who might have access to information as to Army purchases."

"It would be so grossly improper that I want to know about it," Royall declared.

In addition to an immediate investigation, Stassen called for:

1. A law prohibiting dealing in commodities by "any official or employe of the State, War, Commerce or Executive Departments."

2. The extension of export controls, but placing them in the hands of a new agency for administering the Marshall Plan.

3. A law giving the Government control over inventories.

4. Consumer credit controls to slow up installment and credit buying.

5. Temporary restrictions on commodity exchanges.

Several times within recent months, President Truman has denounced speculation in grain and other commodities. In announcing the food conservation program of the Citizens Food Committee on October 5, Mr. Truman said:

"Another factor that contributes to high prices of food is gambling in grain. Grain prices naturally respond to the law of supply and demand, but they should not be subject to the greed of speculators who gamble on what may lie ahead in our commodity markets.

"There is a place for legitimate trading in futures and for hedging transactions. But 90 per cent of all accounts in a recent corn futures market were found to be speculative. Trading in wheat futures rose 75 per cent in September compared with August. Normal trading in wheat at Chicago should amount to three or four million bushels a day. In this past September, however, trading averaged almost 30 million bushels a day. In a single month, on one exchange, almost half the year's crop was traded—bought and sold—just plain gambled."

Speculators Names

After stating that he was directing the Commodity Exchange Commission to demand higher margins for grain speculation, the President added:

"The cost of living in this country must not be a football to be kicked about by gamblers in grain."

The Department of Agriculture has known for several weeks the names of all who have been speculating in amounts above 1000 bushels in both corn and wheat.

It recently asked for a statement of all positions—which means everyone's account in which as much as 1000 bushels of wheat is involved—at the close of trading September 17. It also ordered all exchanges to report all transactions in those accounts September 18, 19 and 20.

A similar demand was made on dealings in corn as of July 1. That report divulged that "of 4351 traders, 3932, or 90.4 per cent, were indicated as speculative."

On October 9 in Chicago, Secretary Anderson declared:

"I can call names—some of them public figures—who are speculating in large quantities of grain."

Anderson added that speculation in grains "jeopardizes our economic stability, and when the Chicago exchange alone shows trading of 666 million bushels, or half the entire crop, in one month, I know there is speculation."

Commodity Exchange Authority figures show that wheat dealings grew to 666 million bushels in September from 387 million in August, 465 million in July, 254 million in April and as low as 104 million in January.

Corn dealings grew from 158 million bushels in January to 501 in June, 487 million in July, 460 million in August and 378 million in September.

Royall Questioned On Nazi War Plants

Shipment to Reds Laid to Potsdam By Army Head

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Shipments of machinery from dismantled German war plants to Russia and her satellites in accordance with the Potsdam Agreement came in for angry criticism before the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday.

Royall

Chairman Bridges (R., N. H.) demanded to know why 80 per cent of such shipments promised from the American Zone had been made to Russia, in view of Russia's refusal to join in unifying the Occupied zones.

"It just doesn't make sense to come here asking billions to oppose Communism in Europe, and still ship munitions plants to Russia," Bridges told an Army Department group headed by Secretary Royall.

Senator Saltonstall (R., Mass.) asked Royall what action Congress could take to stop shipments from both the American and British Occupied Zones.

Such action, Royall said, would be regarded by Belgium, the Netherlands and other western European nations, as breaching American agreements on reparations payments.

"This is only a curbstone opinion," Royall said, "but if we are obligated by treaty to furnish these reparations, that could not be changed by congressional action in violation of the treaty."

Royall agreed that shipments of German machinery to 18 nations to which they were promised in the Potsdam agreement, had proceeded much faster from the American zone than from the British zone.

Col. Lawrence Wilkinson, economic adviser to Gen. Lucius Clay, American commander in Germany, said it was America's desire to demilitarize Germany as fast as possible.

Bridges agreed that demilitarization of German war plants was desirable, but added: "I'd blow them up rather than ship them to Russia."

Crop Forecast

'48 to Bring Plenty of Vegetables

Although the Nation's dinner tables will see less meat next year, they will have more vegetables than this year, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported yesterday.

Because of better growing conditions in the Southern winter vegetable areas, production in the first three months of 1948 is expected to be 8 per cent above this year, BAE predicted, and 26 per cent above normal.

Crops in which production will be above last year include green lima beans, beets, cabbage, carrots, celery, escarole, lettuce and shallots. Artichokes, kale, green peas and cauliflower will be less than this year. Spinach will be 13 per cent above this year but 9 per cent below normal.

Fewer Citrus Fruits

Citrus fruits will be far above the prewar average, but slightly less than this year. Oranges and tangerines are estimated at 112 million boxes against 118 this year; grapefruit 62 million boxes compared with 59 this year, and lemons 14 million against 13½ million this year.

Recent rains in the Southwest winter wheat belt have "bettered prospects for next year's crop" BAE reported.

"Much of the acreage sown late is poorly developed," the forecast added. "Its survival depends upon continued good weather."

Rains Delay Harvest

The recent rains that helped the wheat prospects, however, delayed harvesting of other crops. "Some corn is deteriorating in the fields," BAE reported. "Extremely wet weather in Southeastern areas resulted in some loss in sweet potatoes, peanuts and vine hay."

Egg production set a new high record for November, exceeding November, 1946, by 6 per cent. That poultry raisers have culled nonproductive birds from their flocks in compliance with President Truman's food conservation program, is shown by the report. The number of eggs produced per hen was 6 per cent above a year ago.

GOP Enters Inflation Bill

assumption that a cheap money policy and "inflated dollars" are necessary to maintain the national debt.

He also insisted that the Federal Reserve Board had failed to use all the powers it already has to curb credit. The fiscal section in his legislation, he went on, is intended as a statement of congressional policy against "cheap money" and a "memorial" to the Administration "to use the powers it has to stabilize prices."

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Eccles, asked last night to comment on the Wolcott bill's reserve boosting provisions, declared:

"It doesn't mean a thing."

He has indicated that with a few exceptions, Federal Reserve Banks already have as high gold backing as the proposed legislation prescribes.

Other powers which Wolcott mentioned as having not been invoked are authority to raise the rediscount rate, and to raise the reserve requirements of commercial banks.

Testifying before the Joint Economic Committee earlier yesterday, Eccles announced that he would soon boost the rediscount rate from its present 1 per cent to 1¼. This is the rate charged by any of the Federal Reserve Banks for loans to member banks.

Effective World Government Seen As 'Last Chance'

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—Cord Meyer, author of Peace or Anarchy, told 400 midshipmen last night "the only chance left to the world is effective world government."

Speaking at the Middies' wardroom panel, Meyer, who was aide to Harold Stassen at the United Nations Charter Conference, said the present courses open to the United States are:

1. Continuing the present policies, which means a continued arms race among the great powers and eventual war.
2. A preventive war against Russia.
3. Effective revision of the United Nations to make it "a lawmaking power."

Mechanical Brain To Put on Show

Aberdeen, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—The world's biggest and fastest "brain" and some of the men who helped develop it will be demonstrated at the proving grounds tomorrow at a meeting of the Eastern Association for Computing Machinery.

The association includes 200 of the Nation's leading mathematicians. Among them is J. W. Mauchly of Philadelphia, one of the developers of ENIAC—the world's largest electronic computing device now used at the Ballistic-Research Laboratories here.

The electronic computer has solved in 60 hours problems that the mathematicians said would take 30 years for ordinary machinery.

Bill Would Curb Red Visits

By The Associated Press

Senator Bridges (R., N. H.) proposed yesterday that the United States limit visits by Russians to the number of Americans the Soviets are willing to receive.

Introducing legislation to that end, Bridges said this country should give Russian citizens "the same treatment . . . as Soviet Russia permits us behind the iron curtain."

In a statement, Bridges added that "the gross inequality" of access to information and freedom of travel between the two countries was "forcibly brought to my attention" when Moscow declined to issue visas last summer for a Senate committee to visit Russia.

The Appropriations Committee, which Bridges heads, sought permission to inspect the United States Embassy at Moscow, but the Soviet turned down a request for visas.

"I believe it is time we became realistic in our diplomatic exchanges, particularly in our relations with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics," Bridges declared.

"In these days, when the unspeakable horrors of atomic and bacteriological capsule warfare have become a scientific actuality, we cannot afford, in the exercise of wishful thinking, to become what many people in this country describe for lack of a more appropriately descriptive word as 'an easy touch.'

"This is vital when the matter seriously affects our national security."

His resolution would require action by the Secretary of State, within 30 days, after its approval by both houses of Congress, to cancel visas now outstanding to the extent that they exceed the number issued to Americans by Moscow.

U. S. to Retain B-29 Field, 13 Other Bases Under Renewal of Agreement With Panama

Panama and the United States yesterday signed a new agreement granting this country continued use of a large air base and 13 other defense sites required for the defense of the Panama Canal.

The new pact for a renewed lease of the wartime-built facilities on Panamanian soil outside the Canal Zone was signed for the two nations by Acting Foreign Minister Francisco A. Filos and United States Ambassador Frank T. Hines in Panama City.

Foreign Minister Ricardo J. Alfaro resigned Tuesday in protest against the agreement, saying the length of the lease for the air base was "unjustified." Alfaro was formerly Panama's minister to the United States.

National Institute students in Panama City plan a demonstration before the Assembly Building, urging the legislators to reject ratification of the pact, the United Press reported from Panama.

Under the terms of the new lease, the State Department here announced, we get a 10-year lease on the big B-29 base at Rio Hata, about 70 miles west of Panama City, with the option for a renewal for 10 more years.

The 13 defense sites, including fighter strips, radar stations and other navigational aid installations, were leased for five years. The State Department said "current and future security requirements" of the Panama Canal make the defense sites necessary.

Coinciding with this move to keep the defenses of the vital artery spread over the wider area required by modern conditions, a congressional subcommittee warned of the danger of over-concentration of bases in continental United States.

The group—made up of two members of the House Armed Services Committee and two from the House Expenditures Committee—said that one or two atom bombs dropped in the San Francisco Bay area would be enough to "cripple and perhaps fatally, all American activities in the Pacific."

They urged that Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal conduct a survey to determine if major supply and repair facilities of the Army, Navy and Air Force within the United States should not be relocated and redesigned to meet the terrific threat of atomic war.

Yesterday's agreement to continue wider dispersal of Panama Canal defenses followed a recommendation by Brig. Gen. Joseph C. Mehaffey, Governor of the Canal Zone, that a sea-level waterway between the Atlantic and Pacific be constructed due to the great vulnerability of the present artery's locks to atomic attack.

Under the new Panama-United States agreement, the United States assumed authority for all technical, military and economic matters connected with the defense sites. It replaces a wartime accord of May 18, 1942, which granted the United States a lease of 134 defensive sites in Panama.

An official government communique released in Panama City declared the new pact "recognized that the present international situation requires United States occupancy of the defense sites, in the interests of the security of both countries."

Representatives of both governments will be appointed to administer the agreement. The Panama Assembly must approve, but State Department officials were uncertain whether or not the Senate would have to confirm it.

Florencio Arosemena Forte, the United Press reported from Panama City, is scheduled to replace the resigned Alfaro as foreign minister. Forte is attorney for the United States Government in the Panama Railroad Co., the UP said.

The members of the House subcommittee which investigated Pacific Coast bases said that considerable duplication as well as "dangerous concentration" of facilities existed in the San Francisco Bay area. It pointed to the existence "side by side" of Army and Navy supply bases in Oakland, Marine Corps supply depot in San Francisco, the naval shipyard at Hunter Point and the naval air base at Alameda.

Second Girl Wins Carol Honor

The Washington Post
JANE STARR WARD
Writes Christmas Carol

A second Montgomery County youngster will receive national recognition this month for composing an original Christmas Carol.

She is Jane Starr Ward, 12-year-old Richard Montgomery High School seventh grader.

Yesterday, The Washington Post told the story of Joyce M. Kent, 12, of 301 Cumberland dr., Bethesda, whose Christmas carol entitled "Worship," will be published in the December 27 issue of Collier's magazine and played by Fred Waring's orchestra during a radio program December 17.

The story brought the disclosure that Jane also is to receive this recognition. Jane lives at 511 W. Montgomery ave., Rockville.

Three other girls to be similarly honored live in Athens, Ohio; Berkeley, Calif., and Trenton, N. J.

"Thrilled" at the knowledge her three-verse carol entitled simply, "A Christmas Carol," was one of those chosen by Waring who acted as judge in the competition, Jane confessed yesterday the composition was required "homework."

"My piano teacher made me compose songs when I was taking lessons," she said. She has composed six such songs, one of which received a "superior" rating and four of which were rated "excellent" in the composition sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs.

"No, I don't want to be a composer," she said yesterday, adding to her questioner she wasn't quite sure just what she did want to do when she grew up.

Her only hobby, she disclosed, is collecting dolls from foreign countries.

Jane's mother, Mrs. M. E. Ward, is a secretary at the Rockville Elementary School and her father, an engineer, is with the water division of the District Government. She has lived in Rockville all her life, she said.

bigger, twin-engined jet aircraft—perhaps by elimination of the "island"—if Navy designers so decide.

It would certainly allow for alteration of antisubmarine vessels, installation of new and expensive radar and fire control gear on various types of ships, and alteration of craft for operation in Arctic waters.

Presumably special legislation would be required to convert additional battleships and cruisers into guided missles warships, for this would be a change of warship type. The battleship Kentucky and the battle cruiser Hawaii are in process of conversion to guided missile ships, but work is suspended pending development of satisfactory missile.

Temporary wartime legislation permitted such conversions and lifted the $450,000 limit.

Water Main Bonds Are Approved By Falls Church

A one-million-dollar, 35-year, self-liquidating bond issue has been approved by the Falls Church town council to provide the town with its own water connections with the District system.

The action came during the council meeting Monday night, in which Councilman J. H. McCarthy criticized Arlington County for refusing to give the town more water, yet offering to provide a large supply to the Kings Kitchen housing development lying almost entirely in Fairfax County.

Roy F. Dunn, town manager, told the council that 20 and 24-inch water mains would link the Falls Church system with the Dalecarlia reservoir in Washington, with more distribution mains installed in Falls Church. The new water system is tentatively scheduled for completion in September, 1949.

Moscow U. N. Center Due to Open Jan. 15

Soviet National Will Head Office Of Information

Lake Success, Dec. 10 (AP).—The United Nations is completing arrangements to open an information center under supervision of a Soviet national in Moscow January 15 for dissemination of U. N. public intelligence and measurement of its reaction on the Russian people, it was learned today.

The full extent of Soviet control over the project still was not clearly defined.

A high U. N. official said the Kremlin had agreed to the plan but that details, such as personnel and operating procedures, still must be ironed out. This official said a Russian officer employed by the U. N. would be in charge and the Soviet government would rule on visas for any of the five assistants to be assigned eventually to him.

So far the main avenues for getting information on the U. N. to the Russian people have been through dispatches transmitted to Russia by Tass, official news agency, and from correspondents of the Moscow newspapers Pravda and Izvestia. The United States State Department's "Voice of America" broadcasts, including U. N. developments in general news summaries, also have a Russian audience.

Sampling of Russian reaction in the past has been possible mainly through U. N. monitoring of the Moscow radio.

Moscow's will be the third U. N. information office established in eastern Europe. Warsaw and Prague already have offices. The network of information centers includes London, Paris, Geneva, Copenhagen, New Delhi, Shanghai, Mexico City, Rio de Janeiro and Washington. Nationals of foreign countries serve on most of these staffs.

Appropriations have been made by the General Assembly for another center in Cairo, but these plans have not materialized.

Behjamin Cohen, assistant secretary-general in charge of information, declined to comment on the Cairo situation, but it was understood from other sources that the U. N. is reluctant to set up an office there now in view of the tense situation over partitioning of Palestine.

The Cairo situation leaves Africa and Australia as the only continents without a U. N. office.

Nobel Prize Awards for 1947 Made

Stockholm, Dec. 10 (AP).—Nobel prizes worth $201,348 were awarded today in Stockholm and Oslo.

At a brilliant ceremony in Stockholm's concert hall, King Gustav V bestowed Nobel prizes for 1947 valued at $162,348 on five eminent scientists from Britain, the United States and Argentina, and a world-renowned French author.

Quaker Groups Honored

In Oslo, the 1947 Nobel peace prize of $39,000 was given to two Quaker organizations at a ceremony attended by King Haakon, Crown Prince Olav and other prominent Norwegians. Gunnar Jahn, chairman of the Norwegian Nobel Committee, bestowed a medal on Prof. Henry J. Cadbury, representing the American group, and on Miss Margaret Backhouse, British group's representative.

A half share in the prize in physiology and medicine went to Dr. Carl F. Cori and his wife, Dr. Gerty Cori, of Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., in recognition of their discovery of a chemical compound in human bodies which manufacturers the blood sugar known as glycogen.

Medicine, Physics

The other half of the prize in the fields of medicine and physiology went to Dr. Bernardo A. Houssay of Buenos Aires.

The British were represented by Sir E. V. Appleton, who received the physics award, and Sir Robert Robinson, who was awarded the chemistry prize.

The literature award went to Andre Gide, French writer who embraced communism, and later wrote of his disillusionment at the way it was practiced in Russia. He was too ill to attend, and French Ambassador Gabriel Puax accepted for him.

2 Members Of Hospital Board Quit

Book

Robinson

Resignations of two members of the Alexandria Hospital board of directors, President David C. Book and Clarence J. Robinson were announced yesterday.

Book, a member of the board for five years and president for the past year, said his resignation is effective January 1. Robinson's takes effect immediately.

Book said he resigned because of the pressure of his work as business manager of the Alexander Chamber of Commerce. Robinson also gave pressure of private business as reason for resigning.

The recent Clemmons survey report, critical of the hospital's administration, had no bearing on their decisions to resign, both men said. The hospital's board will meet Monday with the Hospital Corporation, to discuss what action to take on the survey report.

New Law Upped Rents 5 Per Cent

By the United Press

The Labor Department reported yesterday that residential rents increased five times as much during the first four months under the 1947 rent control law than during five years of "stricter" wartime controls.

The department said residential rents in 29 of the Nation's largest cities jumped about 5 per cent from last June to October 30. It said average rents during the wartime controls—between June, 1942, and June, 1947—increased only 1 per cent.

The Housing and Rent Act of 1947 became law last June. It authorizes rent boosts up to 15 per cent where landlords and tenants agree on the increase and sign a new lease running to December 31, 1948. The act also provides for "hardship' increases and authorizes flat decontrol of hotels, transient guest houses and housing units completed after last February 1.

The department said that "most of the rent changes" under the new act were made under the voluntary agreement provisions.

Meanwhile, the department said that retail food prices dropped 0.9 per cent between mid-September and mid-October but the decline failed to shake the over-all cost of living from its all-time record peak.

It said the seasonal drop in food prices was offset by higher prices for rents, fuel, clothing and housefurnishings.

As of last October 15, the cost of living was 22.9 per cent above June, 1946, when most price controls were abandoned.

The department's survey of the effect of the new rent control law was the most comprehensive yet issued by the Government. The survey was based on studies in the 29 large cities and, the department said, all the cities experienced rent increases.

"The rapid change reported in the last four months contrasts sharply with the relative stability of rents under stricter wartime controls," the department said. "In the 32 months between September, 1939, and May, 1942, rents advanced slightly more than 5 per cent.

"But," it added, "with the imposition of rent controls beginning in June, 1942, residential rents were cut back and stabilized and in the five-year period ended last July rents rose only 1 per cent."

The department said the rent increases "usually ranged from $4 to $8 per month."

It said Chicago had the largest average boost—9.5 per cent. It said that rents were raised there in one out of every two rented dwellings. Indianapolis was second with an average increase of 8.4 per cent, and one out of every three units was affected.

Denver, Richmond, Va.; Kansas City, Mo.; St. Louis and Minneapolis all had rent boosts of around 6 per cent and in each of these cities one out of every three rental units was more expensive in October than in June.

School Strike

Although the strike of a group of Negro parents and their children over conditions at the Blow and Webb Schools has diminished in intensity, the continuing wholesale absences are a matter of which neither the Board of Education nor the parents concerned can be very proud. The bitterness of the parents over the situation in which their children must shuttle back and forth as much as 15 blocks has not been assuaged. For that reason we congratulate Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, on her decision to attend a mass meeting of parents tonight to discuss the issues informally.

Consultation with parents in a joint attempt to solve the problems raised by the transfer of schools is precisely the approach the Board of Education should have followed in the beginning. It is futile to maintain that the public hearing on the new use for Blow and Webb Schools gave parents an adequate opportunity to comprehend the facts and register their objections. Nothing is plainer than that the parents did not understand either what was to be expected of their children or the reasons for it. The result is that many parents learned of the transfer only through exaggerated rumors or through incomplete information brought home by their children. We hope that the present unhappy experience will guide the Board of Education in future decisions of this sort. In the last analysis the board has no more important responsibility than to the parents of the children who attend the schools. By the same token one of the basic tasks of school administrators is to promote full public understanding of their program.

In Dispute

The dispute about whether, if justice prevailed in this world, Mr. Joe Louis of New York or Mr. Joe Walcott of Camden, N. J., would now be champion, still rages bitterly. Most of those who heard the running radio account of the fight, broadcast last Friday night from Madison Square Garden, seem to be numbered among Mr. Louis' supporters; most of those who saw the thing by means of television apparatus appear to have aligned themselves with the opposite party, of which our own Mr. Shirley Povich is one of the leaders.

Mr. Povich in his dispatch datelined "Video," described the decision of the two judges, the Messrs. Frank Forbes and Marty Monroe—who together outvoted the referee, Mr. Ruby Goldstein—as "the boldest robbery in modern heavyweight annals." This metaphor appears to convey the opinion of many of the other newspaper writers who were present in the line of duty, and apparently the opinion of Mr. Walcott himself, who is said to have been much astonished by the verdict. As for Mr. Louis, though he did not go as far as to question the validity of the decision, he confessed that he had been somewhat disappointed by his own performance.

However, after what we trust is a fair and impartial examination of the testimony, it strikes us that this controversy turns upon a highly technical question—viz, what is the proper method of scoring a prize-fight that is not terminated by a knockout? The case for Mr. Walcott appears to rest on the uncontested evidence that he knocked down Mr. Louis twice, once for a count of seven and once for a count of two, and that in general he hurt Mr. Louis considerably more than Mr. Louis hurt him. The case for Mr. Louis appears to rest on the fact, also undisputed, that from the third round to the eleventh he was the aggressor. Here, of course, it is necessary to keep the journalistic categories straight; in certain contexts aggressiveness calls for disapproval, as for example "agressor nations"; but in other contexts for approval, as for example "a hustling, aggressive ballplayer," "an alert, aggressive sales policy," etc. Thus there appears to be an influential school which considers Mr. Louis' aggressiveness to have been more commendable on esthetic grounds than Mr. Walcott's fabianism. The fact that Mr. Walcott is the father of six children and the fact that he lives in New Jersey are considered by some of the more technically minded devotees of this sport to be interesting but irrelevant. Happily, no question of racial prejudice or of constitutional liberties appears to have been raised.

Considering the subtlety and complexity of the points at issue we feel disinclined to involve ourselves in this controversy. At the bottom of it, we suspect, is the fact that until now Mr. Louis has been too successful and efficient as a fighting machine to have been a really popular champion and that there is general desire for a change. With a few exceptions, the contests in which Mr. Louis has engaged in defense of his championship have been much too brief and too humane for the public taste. After all, it is mainly for the pleasure of seeing men hurt each other that people go to boxing matches, and until last Friday evening Mr. Louis had scarcely been hurt at all.

Too Much Money

Outside of those private banking circles that are opposed to any form of credit control there appears to be strong support for reimposition of consumer credit controls. In our opinion such a move is highly desirable, as it would enable the Federal Reserve Board to fight inflationary forces in this particular credit field. However, there is considerable danger that if steps are taken to arrest the rapid expansion of consumer credits, Congress as well as the public may be misled into concluding that no further action on bank credit is required.

That would be most unfortunate. Expansion in the consumer credit area is insignificant when compared with the concurrent expansion of all types of commercial bank loans. One of the arguments against restoration of consumer credit controls put forward by dissenting bankers, indeed, is that it is unfair to single out for control a form of lending that they consider of minor importance in the over-all credit picture. In our opinion this kind of argument is not an adequate defense against reimposition of controls over a type of lending that adds to inflationary pressures and, in the absence of controls, may lead to serious abuses. Rather, it emphasizes the importance of some system of over-all credit controls that would also check commercial loan expansion in other areas. Inflation is a reality; it is a phenomenon of too much money competing for too few goods, and there must be a real grapple with the problem of bringing them into a stable relation with each other.

Chairman Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board points out that from the beginning of 1946 through October of this year the loans and investments—other than Treasury obligations—of member banks increased by an estimated 12 billion dollars. This expansion, together with gold acquisitions during the period, is largely responsible, he says, for an increase of 14 billion dollars in privately held bank deposits. Only a fraction of that tremendous addition to monetary supplies is the result of an expansion of consumer credits. Moreover, that expansion occurred while curbs on installment credits were in effect. The increase in bank loans to all classes of borrowers, excluding the United States Government, amounted to seven billion dollars during the year ended September 30, raising the total volume of such loans to about 36 billion dollars. At that date, total installment credit outstanding amounted to 5.3 billion dollars, while consumer credits of all sorts totaled 11.4 billion dollars.

During the past year, when commercial bank loan expansion was proceeding at a rapid rate, the Federal Reserve Board index of industrial production advanced only 5 points and last September was below the level of the opening months of this year. The evidence points to one conclusion: namely, that production is leveling off and further additions to purchasing power resulting from an unchecked expansion of bank lending will, therefore, add to the upward pressure on prices without offsetting increases in the volume of salable goods. The upward movement might be slowed, but it would not be halted, if credit controls were to be limited to consumer credits only.

Goldfish Bowl

The country is indebted to Mr. Morris L. Ernst for a new approach to the dilemma of undercover conspiracies operating within our democracy. In various speeches and writings and, more recently, in an interview with the New York Herald Tribune, Mr. Ernst, who is a progressive thinker and a member of the President's Civil Rights Committee, has suggested legislation to strip the cloak of anonymity from secret organizations of both the right and the left. His basic thought is that democracy operates best in the limelight. "My faith," he says, "is in the free market place of thought, from which I deeply believe that the truth will emerge the victor. I believe that if democracy meets the Klan or communism in the market place, democracy will triumph."

At present communism conspires in the dark and shows a false face in the market place. Mr. Ernst would not make martyrs of Stalin's henchmen in this country by outlawing the Communist Party. Nor would he hound the commies by the witch-hunting methods of the Thomas Committee. His approach is to bring all legitimate organizations out into the open and thus reflect suspicion upon all those that insist upon operating in the dark. We think this suggestion has constructive possibilities.

The proposed law would invite every voluntary organization in the United States to publish its aims, interim program and membership lists and the source of its funds. Presumably punishment would be inflicted for deliberate falsehoods in making such statements. But no organization would be declared illegal. The only penalty for any groups continuing to operate under cover would be governmental and public suspicion as to their loyalty. Mr. Ernst would deny employment in the Department of State, the defense establishment and allied agencies to anyone belonging to an undercover organization. The plan could be made still more effective, of course, by denying all Federal jobs to the members of secret organizations.

By this means, Mr. Ernst thinks, the heat now arising from loyalty tests could be taken off the individual and put on the organization. It should not be supposed, of course, that such a law would remove all need for inquiring into the loyalty of Government employes, for so long as secret organizations continued to exist there would remain a question as to whether public servants belonged to them. But the proposal would have the effect of separating the sheep from the goats in what seems the least obnoxious way that has come to our attention.

The probable effect of such a law ought to be carefully studied. Would it, for example, tend to embarrass religious minorities? Or, if religious organizations were exempted, would this create a loophole for evasion of the law by really subversive elements? Whatever disadvantages may be turned up, however, would have to be weighed against the great advantage of having all factions that seek to mold public opinion and to attain political objectives conduct their activities in the open.

Another enormous advantage would be the exposure of subversive racketeers who now fleece the public of millions of dollars yearly under false pretenses. Mr. Ernst points out that Communists got behind the raising of funds for defense of the Scottsboro boys who had been charged with rape under suspicious circumstances in Alabama and collected perhaps a million dollars. The actual cost of the defense was about $60,000. We could give other illustrations, having exposed some subversive racketeers ourselves, though incurring threats of libel suits in the process.

The plain fact is that the American people are foolishly supporting numerous subversive or highly questionable causes without knowing what they are doing. That is a thoroughly unhealthy situation, and we are glad that Mr. Ernst has initiated discussion of means to bring everything pertaining to our political life out into the open. In times like these democracy can scarcely hope to retain its vigor unless it operates in a goldfish bowl.

Two-Way Taft

Yesterday this newspaper took account editorially of what seemed to be a concession to the facts by Senator Taft on the probability of a meat shortage next spring and the need for meat rationing. Apparently our optimism as to the meaning of Mr. Taft's extemporaneous speech in New York was premature. Senator Taft has now sought to wiggle out of any inference that he indorsed meat rationing. "I didn't predict it, or suggest it, or favor it," he has subsequently instructed reporters.

The dichotomy thus produced is interesting, to say the least. In his New York speech Senator Taft was quoted as saying: ". . . by April there will be a great shortage of meat. It has been suggested that we put in rationing of meat by April, and we may do it. It has been proposed that we ration on the English system . . . We may do it. If we do it at all, I think that is certainly the way to do it." Later in the same speech the Senator was quoted as stating: "Unless it is drastically necessary, I hate to do it, and yet we may." Only Senator Taft knows whether he "favors" meat rationing in the event the shortage becomes acute; but if his remarks do not constitute both suggestion and prediction, then what do they mean?

This is not the first time Mr. Taft has contradicted himself within the space of a few days. When the Joint Committee on the Economic Report, of which he is chairman, several weeks ago considered the proposals of Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, to increase bank reserves, Mr. Taft appeared to be critical. He showed concern lest such a move disrupt the credit necessary for business expansion. Yet in his speech in Philadelphia December 1, Mr. Taft specifically indorsed Mr. Eccles' suggestion for controlling the increase in bank credit as one of the measures that may be desirable to combat inflation. The same indorsement is implicit in the Republican anti-inflation program announced Wednesday by Mr. Taft and Congressman Halleck.

In regard to meat, the Senator's effort to disavow the interpretations placed on his New York remarks is the more intriguing because of his use in the speech of the pronoun "we." By implication Mr. Taft also was speaking for some of his Republican colleagues. Has there been a change of heart, or did Mr. Taft commit the party beyond his authority? The net effect of the contradiction is somewhat bewildering. Mr. Taft cannot have been right both times. The conclusion, it seems to us, is either that he has indulged in some off-the-cuff remarks without reference to the facts—in which case he is talking nonsense—or that Senator Taft is in disagreement with Candidate Taft. In any event it will be a neat trick if he can contrive to run in both directions at the same time.

SKYSCRAPER

From here the city cliffs jut out and down
In square-cut parallels of stone. The shores
Are sharp, the seething seas throw up the sound
Of living from the streets like great applause
At nothing. Loud in the clever canyons runs
The everyday Niagara, cataract
Of industry, bright miracle that stuns
The sterile dreamer, sears the air with fact.

A strage dimension in a time and space
A world away. The sun's symmetric wheel,
The moon's white cycle, stars against the face—
Here in the lower heavens a man could be

"Admitting DPs"

Your editorial of November 22, with its reminder that we must not forget the tragic problem of Europe's displaced persons, was particularly well-timed. As you pointed out, we must not permit the urgency of the stopgap aid for Europe and the long-range European Recovery Plan, to minimize the importance of an early solution for these pitiful survivors of totalitarian persecution.

Eighty-five per cent of the DP camps are in Germany, where there is no chance of eventual assimilation for the occupants. Germany, with its shattered economy, is already overcrowded with millions of its own nationals displaced westwards from former German-held territories. Twenty per cent of the population of all DP camps is Jewish, while 80 per cent is Christian; they are all sufferers from barbaric treatment. The displaced persons have among them many experts and artisans and thousands of agricultural workers. They need not become public charges, but can contribute useful citizenship to the countries farsighted enough to utilize this good human material.

The present system of continued maintenance of DP camps without vigorous action toward solving the problem is costly in dollars as well as a drain on the self-respect of the displaced persons.

In the resettlement of the displaced persons, the sick and infirm must be provided adequate medical care; others must be given a chance and a place to settle and work. Some have to accept work foreign to their earlier training, but Americans who have polled opinion in the DP camps voice no uneasiness on that score. On the whole, the displaced persons are pitifully eager to do their utmost to return to useful, productive living.

America should take the initiative by offering to accept a fair share; our example will influence other nations. This initiative should be taken not only for the maintenance of United States leadership, but also in the cause of humanity. There are vast undeveloped regions in our country and in our possessions. Our West has areas that could be opened to displaced persons without depriving a single American of his livelihood. Alaska is rich with undeveloped resources and has climate particularly suitable to many of the displaced persons from the Baltic states. It would be expensive initially to give these unfortunate people a fresh start, but in the end we would gain in contributions to our economy and culture.

"School Picketing"

Congratulations on your December 5 editorial, "School Picketing." It is apparently the best solution for representatives of the parents (and of the children, too!) to sit down and discuss matters with the Board of Education.

May I suggest that if the children temporarily must shuttle long distances between schools that Capital Transit buses be used? There are many available during the afternoon hours.

Your editorial of December 5 on "School Picketing" at the Blow School was provocative. Particularly so was the assertion that "the Board of Education had no alternative in its effort to meet the most pressing inequity" in the schools caused in great part by the widespread congestion among Negroes.

Now the very heart of the whole matter is whether any higher law compels the board to use its educational facilities on a strictly Negro-white basis. There are many who contend vehemently that this is not the case.

Inadequacy of existing school facilities would be markedly lessened by the abandonment of the white-Negro basis.

Chinese Currency

We are so naive that we do not understand that without some sort of stable currency there can never be in China, or anywhere else in the world, an honest and efficient government or an effective army.

Chinese inflation began by a wanton act of our own when we seized all China's silver 12 years ago by our Silver Purchase Act. Whenever we restore this silver, now uselessly hoarded here, we may see more clearly how to judge China. Incidentally, if Chiang could pay his teachers, civil servants and soldiers in silver, he might restore morale, chastize corruption, bring back into channels of commerce hog bristles, tung oil, and eggs which can now be bought at 50 for 50 cents, American money.

No paper money, though backed by gold, will readily find acceptance among illiterate Chinese with their unfortunate current experience. Silver is the only remedy available. Belgium, two years ago, reestablished a stable money and is now prospering beyond any war-stricken European country. Let us stop dawdling and atone for our own sins toward China and help Chiang with a little "first aid" now.

Good Music Programs

As a concert goer of considerable frequency, not to omit the numerous recitals that I also attend, I am always interested in subsequent reviews by your music critics and those of other papers. Invariably, the excellence of the music is noted, together with the paucity of the audience. I have noticed this, myself, and am at a loss to explain it.

Surely, the caliber of the National Symphony Orchestra this season is at an all-time peak and attendance should be at capacity. Yet the Philadelphia Orchestra subscription is sold out and our own orchestra plays to many empty seats. In my humble opinion, both the programs and the playing of the National Symphony are superior to those of the Philadelphia Orchestra. Recitalists who play or sing to packed houses in New York and other cities are met here by pitifully small audiences.

The only possible way to further the interest of the people of our city in good music is to expose them to more and more of it. To this end, it would be necessary to devote more and more air time to good music.

"Whisky Rebellion"

Permit me to express to you my very great appreciation of your editorial in The Washington Post of December 6, "Whisky Rebellion."

If the 60-day suspension of distilling activities comes to an end on December 25, and it is known that this will happen, it will cut the ground completely from under every Christian minister who tries to urge Christmas giving for overseas relief by the church.

Your editorial deserves the hearty commendation of every right-thinking person in the Nation's Capital. More power to you.

"Sham In Korea"

Under the title of "Sham in Korea," a letter from Mr. Yong-jeung Kim, president of the Korean Affairs Institute, appeared in the October 19 issue of your paper. Regarding the election for half membership of the South Korea Interim Legislature, Mr. Kim says, "It is true that these extreme rightists obtained a majority of legislative seats with the aid of police and civil officials." Suffice it to say that the police and the civil service then, as now, was under General Hodge, who condemns the "extreme" rightists as much as his protege, Mr. Kim, and who, minding to appease the Communists, once issued the decree of amnesty for 669 Communist convicts. If there was any official interference, it should seem, it must have been the other way round.

Mr. Kim goes on, "The irregularities in the elections were so prevalent that General Hodge ordered a reelection in some districts." All who know the connected facts do not hesitate to call the general's action an outrage on the Korean electorate.

Dr. Robert T. Oliver is taken to task for calling Dr. Kimm Kiusic and Mr. Lyuh Woon Kyung former Communists. Mr. Kim rounds up by saying, "As every Korean knows, Doctor Kimm and Mr. Lyuh were never Communists." As every Korean knows, Mr. Lyuh was once an avowed Communist and Dr. Kimm a probationary one. Mr. Kim cannot well wish facts away.

Excoriating Dr. Oliver for "agitating" for general election, Mr. Kim points out, "He is well aware of the fact that the election law is very undemocratic . . . The extremists with their numerical strength managed to set the voting age at 23 . . . It was to keep seven million young people (below 23 and above 20), more alert in public affairs than their elders, away from the polls."

By extremists, the patriotic right wing is meant. Numerical strength is the only strength that counts in a democracy, after all. It should be respected instead of being resented. Any limit, let alone age limit, need not be termed "undemocratic," if it is applied to all parties without any discrimination. How could there be "several millions" of youths wronged by the limit in a population of 20 million or so? What ground does Mr. Kim have to suppose more or less alertness in young people ranging between 20 and 23?

If Mr. Kim grieves for democracy being curtailed by a portion of the young population going voteless, how can he at the same time so heartlessly insist on Korea going voiceless by having no election at all?

"No other Korean received so much support from General Hodge as did Rhee. Even in such an advantageous position, Rhee demonstrated neither statesmanship nor leadership expected of him . . ." Dr. Rhee never regarded any position "advantageous" which tended to imperil the cause of Korean independence. We Koreans are grateful to Dr. Rhee exactly for failing to demonstrate the "statesmanship" or "leadership" either General Hodge or Mr. Kim expected of him. They thought appeasement statesmanship. Dr. Rhee fought Communism with all his might. They preferred a foreign-appointed coalition to a general election. Dr. Rhee refused any other mandate than that of the people given through general election.

The peroration runs, "The insistence of the reactionary faction for a hurried election is an indication that Rhee's leadership is slipping as time goes by." For a "liberated" people that has been impatiently waiting to have an election for these 28 months and got none, no election can be justly called "hurried."

How To Live Atomically

By Malvina Lindsay

Parents' Challenge

THE ATOMIC AGE which so many have tried to laugh or push off is bobbing up again. But this need not cause a frightened stampede to radio thrillers or to comic strips. For the new effort now getting under way to make America atom conscious is not designed to scare people by dangling bombs over their heads.

In fact, the bomb has not been a very successful alarm clock in waking the public from preatomic napping. It has been too big, too appalling. Brought up against its terrifying possibilities the average mind turns away. There's no use trying to do anything, it argues, so why worry? Maybe "they" in Washington will find a way out. If not—well dial the next radio jackpot program.

Hence those seeking to educate Americans about what has been called the greatest discovery since the striking of fire are now trying to bring knowledge of atomic energy closer to everyday life. They are trying especially to make people see that their children, even possibly themselves, will live in the beginning of a new age of mankind, in a world vastly different from this one, and that there must be preparation for such living.

FOR EXAMPLE, atomic energy, when it is finally used industrially, will provide much more leisure. How is this to be used? In loafing? In being entertained commercially? In seeking an opiate in movies, comics, aimless riding in motor-car processions? Or by more self-developing, creative pursuits? For if atomic energy can take many physical burdens off man's back, the rearing of children to have cultural resources will become as important as making them vocationally self-sufficient.

Also, in time, great material comforts and luxuries will come through increased production by atomic energy. Will man grow softer by all this, be enervated by ease, made weak by lack of struggle? Can he learn to channel his energies into meeting the moral, intellectual, political problems that will still be with him?

Many forms of disease will be conquered through atomic energy. People will live longer—but for what? How can they be prepared to meet mental and occupational hazards of old age? Can their lives be planned so they will not be lonely and useless?

Travel will be simpler and space diminished. But will the mere mixing of peoples from all over the world insure harmony? Children will need to be given wider and deeper understanding of peoples of all nationalities, colors, religions, cultures. They will need to be trained in adjustment to world neighbors as well as to those in their block.

All of these atomic promises are being used to arouse public interest in this new peacetime force. For those experienced in mass persuasion have found that the chief emotions that move men are fear, hate, desire. The two first can be dynamite used by the unscrupulous, as dictators and demagogues have shown. Since desire is a creative emotion, there is increasing emphasis on the blessings atomic energy can offer.

HOWEVER, the bomb cannot be shoved aside. It threatens the peacetime development of atomic energy. But there again the simple, familiar approach is coming into play. A man may close his mind to devastation 100 atom bombs could cause. Or he may angrily seek a scapegoat for his fears thus aroused—the Government, the atomic scientists, a foreign enemy, an opposing political party.

But he may be impelled to act on the control problem if he thinks of atomic defense in terms of his pocketbook—what it might cost him to see his city decentralized, his property lose value because of population shifts, his tax bill double or treble in an atomically armed world. He may also become concerned over loss of everyday freedoms in atomic defense, over Government controls that would make OPA seem like a slap on the wrist.

Getting the whole significance of atomic energy before the people in such a way that they will feel they can do something about it is the task facing those who possess the knowledge. Probably the most vulnerable point of attack is the problem of how atomic living can be made safe, abundant and creative for today's children.

Power And Peace

In the last war we had time to mobilize, manufacture arms and build an air force second to none. In the age of the atom bomb, the supersonic plane, and the rocket bomb, this opportunity might not be given by an aggressor nation determined to surprise this country. Less than one dozen atomic bombs, strategically placed, could wreck the fighting power of the United States.

The chief defense against surprise is preparedness. The late Theodore Roosevelt said, "Carry a big stick but tread softly." If this policy had been in effect in 1941, would Japan have attacked Pearl Harbor? Could Joe Stalin surprise us by a theoretical attack through Alaska at some future date? Could any nation dare to think of aggression against us?

The universal military training bill would give this country effective utilization of its manpower. Additional appropriations passed through Congress would provide money for the biggest Air Force, Army and Navy in the world. Much money is needed for research on the ever-advancing theories of mechanization. Nations respect power. Let up put the United States in its rightful place as a leader for peace throughout the world.

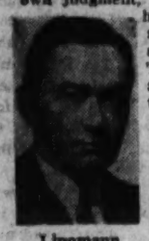
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The French Experience



IT IS reasonably certain that if the French Communist leaders had been free to follow their own judgment, they would not have precipitated such a showdown at this time. There was never a chance that they could capture the government, nor, having defied its authority, be readmitted into the government. But they might have strengthened their position had they been allowed to limit themselves to being the militant champions of the very genuine grievances of the working class.

Lippmann

They were, however, compelled to act as an instrument of Soviet foreign policy. They were ordered out to prevent, if possible, the French government from playing its part in the European Recovery Program, and, failing that, to inflict enough economic injury to make the program much more difficult and expensive to carry out.

THE EVENT has shown that in a country like France the Communist Party is a minority and, in so far as it is the instrument of a foreign power, it is a small minority. As long as the Red Army is unable to intervene, the forces of national resistance are much too strong for the local Communists. They have been defeated by a coalition of the regular political parties—without resort even to the reserves of national power which are represented by General de Gaulle.

Their defeat in this test of power is an event of great importance in Europe and in the world. For the French nation is now permitted and committed to carry out the internal reforms and the international actions which Moscow and the French Communists have tried to prevent.

SO WE HAVE seen that the French democracy is strong enough to resist successfully a threat to its independence. We must, however, recognize that the French people and the French political system have still to meet and overcome the hardest test of all. That is whether by democratic means they can make their government strong enough to carry through those financial and economic reforms which are indispensable if the inflation is to be cured and the European Recovery Program is to be successful.

The French problem is by no means insoluble. It is objectively a far less difficult problem to solve than is the British, not to speak of the German. The French, with good luck in their harvests and with proper assistance from the United States, have the wherewithal to recover from the war, to become solvent, and to play a leading part in the affairs of Europe and of the world. But to solve their problems they must have a stable, efficient, and enlightened government which has the support of the nation.

THE FRENCH problem does not arise, as some American observers have said, from a refusal of the French people to go back to work. The record shows that the recovery of French production since the liberation has been remarkable. The French economic difficulty arises primarily from the fact that though production is near to the prewar level, the charges upon it are abnormal. The French have, therefore, to reduce these charges and at the same time to increase their production.

WHAT ARE some of these charges which weigh so heavily upon the French economy? The repair of damage caused by the war accounts in 1947 for a quarter of the government's expenses and there is a large additional sum which is going into maintenance deferred during the war. Another quarter of the government budget is military. Another third of the budget is for the expanded social services. There is the swollen bureaucracy which is one third more numerous than it was in 1938. There is the enlarged export program, made necessary in order to pay for essential imports. Then there is need for capital investment to modernize and develop key industries.

All of these are charges upon current production, and they are the reason why France has an inflation. French production has to supply the current needs of the French people, and also to support the repair of war damage, deferred maintenance, new capital formation, a relatively large military establishment, and enlarged bureaucracy, enlarged social services, enlarged exports, and also the expenses of empire.

THE QUESTION is whether out of the normal political system a government can be formed which can balance not only the budget but the national economy. It is evident that to reduce the charges on French production in order to achieve this balance will require great sacrifice and extraordinary political discipline.

General de Gaulle and his followers believe that a normal government formed by a coalition of parties cannot be strong enough and stable enough to take the measures—all of them politically unpopular—which will have to be taken if the French economy is to be put in order. We shall see in the next few months whether or not he is right—whether a government like the present government, which has so bravely met the Communist challenge can also meet the challenge of the countless vested interests which are involved in the inflation and the economic disorder.

Western Union Worker Vote Favors Strike

By The Associated Press

Western Union employes were reported rolling up heavy margins yesterday in favor of a pre-Christmas strike for higher wages.

Three AFL unions—the Commercial Telegraphers Union, the Telegraph Workers Union and the Telegraph Employes Union—laid plans for the walkout unless a deadlock with the Western Union Telegraph Co. over the wage scale can be broken.

The three unions claim to represent 50,000 employes in 3000 telegraph offices from coast to coast. Only New York City would be unaffected by a strike. The employes' bargaining agent there is the CIO Communications Association.

The AFL unions are asking an increase of 15 cents an hour, supplementing a 5-cent boost they won last spring. The telegraphers say their members receive an average of 96.7 cents an hour, or $1.025 cents an hour if the 9000 messengers (who get 65 cents) are excluded.

Frank Bloom, attorney for the CTU, said the vote in favor of a strike is running from 9 to 1 to 12 to 1 in Philadelphia, Chicago and Los Angeles. The union counsel predicted that as soon as the vote is complete, probably by Monday, the date for the strike will be set. He added that it undoubtedly would coincide with the height of the Christmas rush.

Headquarters for the strike will be established here.

Radio Directors Guild Authorizes Strike

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—The New York local of the Radio Directors Guild (AFL) has authorized a strike January 1 against the NBC, CBS and ABC networks and Station WOR, New York outlet of Mutual, but both sides expressed hope today it would be averted.

The Guild is asking a weekly minimum of $250 for staff directors, compared with $100 at present, and similar adjustments in other classifications. William Sweets, local president, and director of "Gangbusters," said if a new contract is not agreed upon before the present one expires December 31, picket lines would be thrown around studios. He said a strike would affect most top network shows originating in New York.

Court Upholds Reversal of Sale Order

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—The Maryland Court of Appeals today upheld a Prince Georges County Court decree dismissing a bill to require the sale of land in a West Lanham and West Lanham Hills real estate development.

Judge Charles Markell's opinion for the court said Phillips H. Clarke of Washington, and Vincent C. Tompkins, jr., of Norfolk, Va., sought to take "all the profits . . . from a five-year real estate speculation" conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Brunk of Harrisonburg, Va.

Clarke and Tompkins had contended they purchased 52 lots in the development at a cost of $26,780 five years ago. An agreement with Mr. and Mrs. Brunk entitled them to purchase additional lots and gave them an option to acquire unsubdivided land in West Lanham Hills for $30,000, the plaintiffs argued.

Besides the Harrisonburg couple, defendants included persons who had subsequently bought lots in the area, as well as the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co., Inc., and the West Lanham Hills Citizens Association.

The court supported a defense plea that delay by Clarke and Tompkins in filing their suit was inexcusable. It did not disturb the lower court's ruling that Clarke and Tompkins retained the right "to sue at law."

Spaak Belgian Regime Wins Confidence Vote

Brussels, Belgium, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Social-Christian government of Premier Paul-Henri Spaak was given a vote of confidence, 150 to 32, in the Chamber of Deputies today. The vote came after a spirited debate which caused a fist fight between two members of the chamber. They were ejected.

The debate concerned whether King Leopold 3d, exiled in Switzerland since the end of the war, may return to his throne. Spaak urged that the question be put aside until it can be discussed less passionately.

Calling Washington

By Marquis Childs

Inflation Curb Or Bust?

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio.—Here in this steel city in the heart of the Mahoning Valley, with the roar and clash and clang of a great industry going full blast, all the issues of our day can be seen in sharpest focus.

Childs

On the wall of the union hall is a big placard showing the prices now of bread, meat, butter and eggs, and the comparable prices a year ago. Set out that way, the differences are striking. They add up to the pinch on the pocketbook that almost everyone talks about.

Philip Murray of the CIO has announced another set of wage demands to be presented to industry next spring. Leaders of the United Steelworkers union in this region feel there will be little difficulty in obtaining an additional 15 cents an hour when the time for bargaining comes.

Yet no one really believes that another round of wage rises will solve anything. The rank and file have learned that a wage hike merely means a price hike. And the price jump is likely to be a little higher than the wage increase.

The rank-and-filers say wistfully or angrily, depending on their mood, that somebody down in Washington ought to do something to stop this seesaw. They ought to roll back prices, that's what they ought to do.

"The trouble is we've got the wrong people down there in Washington," says one man.

But who the "right people" might be, no one is quite sure. On the union side there is one certainty—the villain is Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

ON A TABLE in the union hall there is a petition which the members sign as they drop in. It demands that Senator Taft resign. It damns him for his isolationism, for high prices and for general obstructionism. The villain is made out to be a good old-fashioned villain.

On the side of management and ownership the price level is also the chief preoccupation. It is seen, of course, from a different perspective.

Frank Purnell, president of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., and one of the ablest steel masters in the industry, talks about his plans for expansion. He wants to build more capacity, but there is the hurdle of high costs and scarcities.

A new coke oven costs three to four times what it cost prewar. So does a new power plant, badly needed in the face of a growing power shortage. New steel plants built at present costs would have to mean a higher price for steel, says Purnell.

And so the seesaw threatens to go up and up and up. We are getting our economy on a higher and higher peak all the time.

If steel production should drop from the present 100 per cent of capacity to 80 per cent, every steel company in the country would be plunged into the red, with bankruptcy around the corner. That is because fixed costs of production are on such a high plateau.

AT PRESENT capacity, an estimated 5000 to 6000 additional workers are needed in the Youngstown area. That is true, although almost that many persons, who lack essential qualifications, are listed on the unemployment register.

Here is a block to increased steel capacity, unless, of course, it would be possible to assign workers to essential industry. This is impossible in our society or in any society that has for so long had a tradition of free choice.

Is the choice today between regimentation and a runaway inflation which will end in a bust? No one would voluntarily choose either course, for they both threaten the destruction of a free society.

Even though it may be the rankest kind of wishful thinking, I keep coming back to the hope that somehow an agreed solution must be found—that is to say, a minimum of regulation will be accepted by all as the only way to get through the next 12 to 18 months of scarcity.

In spite of the bitter battles of the past, in spite of the Taft-Hartley Act, the working relationship between labor and management seems fairly healthy. Each talks about how good the other side is having it in the boom, but that is natural and it does not prevent the settlement of practical differences.

But the hope of an agreed settlement comes up against the harsh fact of timing. We are approaching one of our quadrennial presidential contests. The two parties seem likely to make these matters of price and supply the battleground of the campaign, and that seems to leave little room for any kind of reasonable agreement.

Methodist Church Planning To Double Missionary Work

Buck Hill Falls, Pa., Dec. 10 (AP).—A program to nearly double the foreign missionary staff of the Methodist Church as well as the present financial aid of the church for missionary purposes was presented today to the Board of Missions and Church Extension.

The proposals, made at the board's annual session, came from Dr. Ralph E. Diffendorfer of New York, executive secretary of the board's division of foreign missions.

Dr. Diffendorfer asked for 595 new missionaries and an annual increase of $3,155,000, boosting the four-year grand total to $16,741,165.

He recommended the largest increase in missionary personnel for Latin-American countries to "counteract the growing atheism and secularization of life in those republics."

"Communism and fascism are vigorous in Latin America," Dr. Diffendorfer declared.

Middle East Arms Business Booming

Indian and European Salesmen Reported Busy Taking Orders in Troubled Areas

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Representatives of big European, Indian and Pakistan armament firms are secretly but actively negotiating with Arabs and Jews throughout the Middle East to sell them rifles, cannons, machineguns, ammunition and other weapons, the Cairo weekly Rosa al Yussef said today.

A group of armament salesmen from India and Pakistan—both of which have important British-built arms factories eager to supply Arabs with all the weapons they need—visited Beirut, Lebanon, last week where they contacted Haj Amin el Husseini, exiled grand mufti of Jerusalem, and many high Lebanese personalities, the publication said.

The group also stopped off in Damascus, Syria, the weekly said, where it conferred with Syrian President Shukri al-Kouatly.

Agents of Czechoslovak, French and Swiss armament firms, traveling under assumed names, are endeavoring to close deals in Iraq and Egypt, as well as Lebanon and Syria, it said.

In addition to seeking profitable deals with the Arabs, these firms—particularly the big Skoda Co. of Czechoslovakia—are reported studying the possibility of setting up arms factories in the Middle East, the publication said.

The majority of purchases until now has been made by the Arabs since the Jews had planned to get their arms from the United States. But the embargo the United Sates has placed on all export of arms to the Middle East may compel the Jews to seek European deliveries.

One of the chief difficulties facing would-be European sellers of arms is how to deliver their wares. Shipping to the Middle East still is extremely inadequate and the only overland route available is the lengthy one through the Balkans, Istanbul and across Turkey.

caping prisoners overpowered and bound the warden in the ancient prison, an official statement said. The break came after Jewish pirsoners in Acre were transferred to Central Prison in Jerusalem. Riots between Jewish and Arab prisoners had flared after the announcement on partition.

Six Jews, one a woman, were killed in an ambush by Arab bedouin tribesmen in the southern desert area.

At the nearby Arab village of Karatiya the Jews struck back and blew up an Arab house. Jewish informants said four Arabs died in the blast.

In the port city of Haifa a British military dispatch rider was mowed down by gunfire and two Jews were killed.

A Jewish policeman guarding Haifa railway station shot and killed an Arab worker he said attacked him.

The bodies of two more Arabs were found in the battered "No Man's Land" between all-Jewish Tel Aviv and all-Arab Jaffa, but comparative quiet prevailed there. Arab informants said Hagana, the Jewish underground army, had asked for a truce in that battleground.

In Jaffa, Mayor Yousef Haikel, voiced his opposition to "brigandry by both Arabs and Jews" and said "thinking Arabs are trying to stop both sides from further violence. We Arabs of Jaffa wish to wait in peace and make no disturbance until we are called to action by our leaders."

Full-Scale Evacuation May Start by Mid-April

London, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—Britain probably will start full-scale evacuation of troops from Palestine in mid-April, one month before it lays down its mandate over the Holy Land, competent sources said today.

British forces may withdraw in February or March from areas in which either Arabs or Jews form the great majority of the population, these sources said.

Argentina Seeks to Buy Arms in U. S.

Buenos Aires, Dec. 10 (AP).—Diplomatic sources said today Argentina is seeking to purchase arms—chiefly defensive weapons—from the United States.

The informants said the Argentine government discussed this with Lieut. Gen. Willis D. Crittenberger, United States Caribbean area commander, during his recent South American tour, but that Crittenberger made no commitments.

These sources said United States relations with Argentina have improved since the Argentine supported United States views at the Quitandinha Hemisphere Defense Conference and that the State Department now may be willing to permit direct sales of arms to the South American nation.

State Dept. Defines Near East

The State Department says the Near East includes 12 countries and a number of Arabian principalities.

A department official undertook the definition yesterday in response to a reporter's inquiry prompted by various references to the area in dispatches on the Palestine disturbances.

The department's Division of Near Eastern Affairs is responsible for relations with Palestine, Transjordan, Lebanon, Syria, Iraq, Egypt, Anglo Sudan, Saudi Arabia, Yemen and Arabian principalities.

Greece, Turkey and Iran are administered separately, but officials said they too are considered part of the Near East.

Some of these territories have been included in the Middle East by various authorities and the State Department itself referred last week to Palestine and several neighbors as Middle Eastern countries. This later was explained as a slip.

The term "Middle East" is avoided in the State Department administrative setup. Under the Division of Southern Asia Affairs are Pakistan, Afghanistan, India, Nepal, Burma and Ceylon.

Definition of the Far East is officially fixed. In this area are placed Japan, China, Korea, the Philippines, Siam, Indo-China, Malaya, British Borneo, various Pacific islands and the Netherlands East Indies.

Witness Tells Grand Jury Gen. Meyers Lied In Testimony About Aviation Electric Co.

A District grand jury yesterday heard a witness swear that Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Myers, retired, told the Senate War Investigating Committee a false story when he testified he established his Aviation Electric Co. only to help his "girl friend" and her husband.

The jury is hearing Government evidence of perjury and subornation of perjury against Meyers. Hearings into this phase will be closed this week, Government spokesmen said. Regular day for returning grand jury indictments is Monday.

Robert L. Pine, a Dayton, Ohio, real estate agent, who was one of the original incorporators of the general's Aviation Electric Co., told the jury the general had set the company up in 1938.

Meyers had sworn he established the company in 1939 solely to bring Mr. and Mrs. Bleriot H. Lamarre back to Dayton from California, because Mrs. Lamarre was his "girl friend" with her husband's "knowledge and acquiesence."

Lamarre, a bookkeeper, became the "dummy" president of the corporation at a real salary of $51.50 a week, and swore he turned his $18,000-a-year executive salary over to Meyers.

As Pine told the story, the Aviation Electric Co. developed without thought of the Lamarres.

He told the jury that in 1937 or 1938 a Dave Johnson of Dayton had come to him with a "gadget" for use in Army radio, and asked Pine to form a company to develop it.

Pine said he asked Meyers, about the only Army officer he knew at Wright Field, to check up on Johnson so that he could find out if the project were worthwhile.

Meyers reported that the gadget was even better than Johnson realized, Pine said.

Then Meyers asked why he shouldn't be the one to back Johnson, Pine testified.

Meyers went ahead, Pine declared, and formed a corporation authorized to issue 250 shares of no-par common stock, with a declared value of $2 a share.

The general, then a major and budget officer at Wright Field, called together Johnson, Pine and a Mrs. June Ballou in the office of a Dayton attorney, Pine testified. Mrs. Ballou has been identified as a secretary in the personnel section at Wright Field at the time.

Meyers insisted the stock should be issued with 224 shares in Mrs. Ballou's name, 25 in Pine's and 1 in Johnson's, Pine told the jury.

He said he had asked at the time why Meyers didn't want the stock in his own name and the officer replied that he had both friends and enemies around Wright Field. His enemies, he said, might try to prevent the company's getting contracts while his friends might give orders they should not place.

The Dave Johnson who invented the original gadget has dropped from sight, Assistant District Attorney Edward Molenof disclosed yesterday and so far has not been located. He is not regarded as a key witness but could furnish corroborative testimony.

Johnson was made president, and the company started business on the second floor of a small Dayton building, Pine said. It included a small office and a shop. Pine said he gave the company a used typewriter and a few chairs and filing cabinets.

Johnson was dropped from the company before Lamarre was brought in to act as president, Pine said.

Then in 1940, Pine testified, Meyers was transferred to Washington.

On November 1, 1940, Pine said, Meyers wrote to him, said he was contemplating selling the company, and asked Pine to return his stock.

Meyers told Pine in the letter that his Aviation Electric Co. had been "a sad and costly" venture and he planned to get out of it.

But Pine has now learened, he testified, that about that time Meyers was working on a deal of more than one million dollars with the Bell Aircraft Corp., and apparently just wanted all the stock back under his control.

A few weeks after receiving Meyers' letter, Pine testified, he turned the stock and that ended his own interest in the company. He never received any profits, he said.

Pine also disclosed that three months or so ago Meyers had come to his home in Dayton, told him a Senate Committee was investigating him and asked Pine to support his story.

Pine refused to tell anything but the facts, he said, and within a week disclosed the true origin of the company to a committee investigator.

Molenof had another Johnson, Roger L. Johnson, a former plant foreman at the Aviation Electric Co., here ready to testify yesterday, but it was believed that his evidence at this time would not be necessary to the present phase of the case, and he was not called.

The hearing will be resumed tomorrow. District Attorney George Morris Fay declined to say who the final witnesses will be. It is known, however, that Francis J. Flanagan, assistant counsel and chief investigator for the Senate Committee, has been summoned to testify.

Democrats Map Plans In Midwest

Omaha, Dec. 10 (AP).—Midwest Democrats seeking ways of regaining ground lost to the Republicans were told last night the responsibility rests on "the front-line soldiers—the party workers."

Sullivan

"We have the issues and a truly progressive program," Executive Director Gael Sullivan of the Democratic National Committee said. "The rest is in the hands of party workers."

The Midwest Democrats spent most of the day behind closed doors working on programs relating to veterans' housing, rent control, the high cost of living, reclamation, flood control and irrigation, the farm program, Government economy, and party finance and organization.

States represented, mostly by State chairmen and chairwomen and national committeemen and committeewomen, were Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Colorado, Wyoming and Montana.

Sullivan's advice was contained in an address prepared for the banquet ending the sixth annual meeting of the Midwest Democratic Conference. Michigan and Wisconsin were formally enrolled as new conference members, bringing the group's strength to 13 States.

Baltimore Welfare Denounced

...he welfare agency is free from political interference and from prejudices and that it is staffed with "sincere and hardworking" employes. But on the debit side, the commission found the welfare department's underlying philosophies "impractical," its management "inadequate," its psychology "unsound; its procedures "unbusinesslike," its attitude toward fraud "complacent," its personnel "dissatisfied," and, on the whole, the department "full of confusion and contradictions."

The commission stated the department "is defeating its own purpose in that its operations tend to make public assistance cases permanent rather than temporary."

Specific recommendations contained in the report were:

A completely new organizational setup, to divide the agency's business and social functions. A "strong executive" to be appointed business manager.

More emphasis on common sense and practical experience in promoting staff members, and less "blind faith" in postgraduate study in social work.

Closer scrutiny of persons seeking relief. Closer follow-up to see that they remain eligible.

More effort to get clients off the relief rolls and make them self-supporting.

Formation of day nurseries, so that deserted mothers can go to work. An end to the city's subsidizing of social study by the department's workers.

A scrutiny of social philosophy at higher levels, and correction of the "educational system" to which public welfare workers are exposed.

The Welfare Department now is second only to the public school system in total annual outlay.

has requested a hearing within the next day or two.

In Washington, Martin Popper, vice president of the National Lawyers Guild, who is associated with counsel for defense, said the 10 will make every effort to extend the hearing on extradition to all the legal issues involved in the case. The 10 have contended that the committee has no right under the Constitution to inquire into their political beliefs.

The Government, however, was furnished new ammunition Tuesday when the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in New York affirmed the conviction for contempt of Leon Josephson, an admitted Communist, who had refused to be sworn and testify before the House Committee at an earlier date.

In a two-to-one decision the court ruled that an individual's rights under the Bill of Rights cannot abridge the right of Congress to gather facts of public interest and upheld the conviction.

In a minority opinion Judge Charles E. Clark held that the committee's conduct bordered on the unconstitutional, but even in his dissent Clark held that Josephson should have been willing to be sworn and testify. The dissent made it possible for the Josephson case to go to the United State Supreme Court.

The Government is expected to use the Josephson decisions in arguments on the movie cases.

In discussing Josephson's contention that the Bill of Rights forbade a committee of Congress from investigating propaganda activities, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals said:

"If this is true, the Constitution itself provides immunity from discovery and lawful restraint for those who destroy it. The theory seems to be that the investigation of un-American or subversive activities impairs in some way not entirely clear the freedom of expression guaranteed by the Bill of Rights.

The eight cited on double counts, each of which can bring a maximum penalty of one year in jail and/or a $1000 fine, are: Dalton Trumbo, Samuel Ornitz, Robert Adrian Scott, Alvah Bessie, Herbert J. Biberman, Ring Lardner, jr., Albert Maltz and Lester Cole.

Indicted on a single count were Edward Dmytryk, director, and John Howard Lawson, writer. Communist Party membership cards for all 10 were placed in evidence before the committee.

Browne Jr. High Pupils Returning

Attendance at the boycotted Negro Browne Junior High School and its two annexes increased markedly yesterday.

Simultaneously workmen moved into the Blow and Webb annexes to start installing science demonstration tables.

The tables are among improvements to the two buildings promised parents who have kept their children out of classes for more than a week in a strike against what they describe as "inadequate facilities."

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, will speak to the parents at a mass meeting they have called at 8 tonight at Jones Memorial Church, 42d and Benning rd. ne.

Mrs. Doyle said she will discuss with the parents reasons why the board transferred the Webb and Blow buildings, formerly used as white elementary schools, to use by Negro Junior High students.

Parents began the strike two days after the transfer, which placed 1223 part-time Browne students on full programs, went into effect.

About one third of the pupils showed up at Browne and the two annex buildings yesterday in what school officers hope is a back-to-classes movement.

Of 1424 pupils scheduled to report at the three buildings in the morning, 577 were present.

Two hundred and ninety-nine students out of 589 who attend morning classes at Browne and afternoon classes at Blow and Webb reported at Browne in the morning. Fourteen were at Blow in the afternoon and 61 at Webb.

On Monday only 190 of the 1927 pupils were in class in the morning and in the afternoon only 2 were in Blow an 7 in Webb.

Garnet C. Winkinson, first assistant superintendent of schools in charge of Negro schools, said that work is progressing on reconditioning blackboards in classrooms in the two annex buildings.

Absence of blackboards in some rooms and their poor condition in others has been one objection raised by parents.

City to Name 'Neutral' to Sit In Clegg Case

A city official will be substituted for an assistant corporation counsel on the trial board to hear charges against three policemen in the Clegg case.

Selection of the "neutral" official will be made by the Commissioners at their regular board meeting today, District Building sources revealed yesterday.

Julius Willie Clegg, 26-year-old Negro veteran, charged he was illegally arrested, detained and beaten by police August 2.

The decision to name a nonlegal department official to the trial board apparently was designed to avoid embarrassmept for Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, who will prosecute the case.

Exact charges against the three policemen were disclosed yesterday by Inspector Clement Cox, chief clerk of the Police Department, who also announced that the trial board would convene Friday.

The charges:

Detective Sergt. Alex K. Kapsol and special investigator David S. Ennis of the sex squad—willfully maltreating and using unnecessary violence toward a prisoner; conduct unbecoming an officer.

Pvt. John G. Gibboney of the First Precinct—conduct unbecoming an officer.

Two othr officers will be called before the trial board Friday for other offenses, Cox said.

They are: Pvt. Robert W. Haun of Eleventh Precinct, charged with failing to take police action when a fight took place November 16 in and around 2804 Nichols ave., se., and Pvt. Jerome J. Jones of Tenth Precinct, charged with failure to patrol his beat or call his station between 2 and 4 a. m., November 30.

Although the trial board will convene Friday, actual taking of testimony in the Clegg case probably will not begin until a later date, officials said.

Clark Asked To Investigate Covenant 'Plot'

Attorney General Tom Clark yesterday was asked to investigate Congress Heights Citizens Association for its activities to prevent the sale of homes in the area of Negroes.

The request was made by Joseph Forer, acting chairman of the First Southeast Chapter, Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Forer asked the Attorney General to determine whether the members of the citizens association have conspired to "intimidate" Negroes.

Forer charged that a meeting of Congress Heights property owners on November 8, attended by 500 persons and sponsored by the association was "marked by references to vigilantism and to possible use of violence."

Harry A. Leibrand, president of the Congress Heights Citizens Association, said last night he had no comment to make on the request for a probe. He said that 1000 property owners in the area had signed cards pledging themselves to a covenant restricting the sale of their homes to members of the Caucasian race.

The association, Leibrand said, is staying further action pending anticipated decisions by the United States Supreme Court on covenant cases now before it.

Union Supplants One Refusing to Supply Red Data

In the first test of its kind under the Taft-Hartley law, a union which submitted non-Communist affidavits required by the act, has won bargaining rights formerly hald by a union which refused to comply.

The National Labor Relations Board announced yesterday that 33 of 35 production workers employed by Sigmond Cohn Manufacturing Co. in New York voted November 17 for the International Association of Machinists as their bargaining representative.

The machinists' union, an independent, was the first major labor organization to meet Taft-Hartley law requirements, and qualify to use NLRB services.

The CIO Wholesale and Warehouse Workers previously had represented the workers, but the NLRB, in a precedent-establishing decision a month ago, refused to permit that union to appear on the ballot.

The Cohn company manufactures metal products.

Va. Senator to Seek State Alcoholic Clinics

Richmond, Va., Dec. 10 (AP).—James E. Gardner, State Senator-elect from Richmond, said today he would introduce a bill soon after the General Assembly convenes next month to provide the first steps in State-financed program of rehabilitation for alcoholics.

The bill, as contemplated, calls for supervision of the proposed clinics by the State Department of Health and will provide for the financing of the program from profits of the ABC board.

Arlington, Fairfax To Get School Checks

Richmond, Va., Dec. 10 (AP).—The State Department of Education has asked the State Comptroller's office to issue checks amounting to $3,086,099.99 to treasurers of various counties and cities as the third installment for maintenance of public free schools in the 1947-48 school term.

Arlington gets $59,983.51 and Fairfax $72,631.80.

Two Officials Defend VA Insurance Service

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Veterans Administration officials said yesterday that veterans' insurance was being given "the best possible service on the basis of existing conditions.

Clark

Acting VA Administrator O. W. Clark and Harold W. Breining, assistant administrator for insurance, told the House Veterans Committee the matter of World War II insurance was not being handled any too smoothly. They explained, though, that carelessness of veterans coupled with inexperienced help were partly to blame.

Before the morning session, Chairman Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.) told reporters the committee had asked that Breining "be promoted or something," so the insurance divisions could be handled by some one else. A subcommitte charged in a recent report that VA insurance service was "most unsatisfactory."

Truman Interested

Breining contended yesterday that in view of conditions since the war "the service we have been giving is remarkable." But he agreed with Representative Kearney (R., N. Y.) there was "no excuse at all" for branch offices failing to answer letters of inquiry.

Much criticism has been leveled at the insurance division of VA because of extraordinary delays in replying to correspondence and failure even to acknowledge letters containing requests which could not promptly be handled. President Truman is known to be concerned over complaints of inefficiency in caring for veterans' insurance matters.

Breining told the committee the VA had difficulty hiring experienced employes, had to expand rapidly and lacked funds to employ as much help as it needed. He said decentralization of insurance operations last year to 13 branch offices also caused business to accumulate.

He challenged a statement by Representative Phillips (R., Tenn.) that "a huge sum of money is floating around" waiting for dividends to be declared on insurance issued during World War II. Breining said no money was floating around and "every cent of it has been accounted for and dividends will be declared this coming year."

In the afternoon a subcommittee of the Veterans Committee, reinforced by the entire Massachusetts delegation, heard complaints brought against the Boston regional office of VA by Massachusetts service organizations.

During the summer recess of Congress all 27 members of the House Veterans Committee made trips into the field to inquire into operation of the VA. Many returned expressing the opinion that decentralization to regional offices had resulted in "chaos" after talking with veterans of both wars in all parts of the country.

Methyl Alcohol Kills 2 Idle Fleet Employes

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 10 (AP).—A spokesman for the United States Marine Hospital disclosed today that two men employed aboard ships in the James River idle fleet had died and five others were hospitalized after drinking methyl alcohol.

One victim was H. Worth Spence, 45, a wiper on the SS Dixie, who was pronounced dead on arrival at the Marine Hospital Monday. The second victim was Hyman Mills, 36, of Aurora and Washington, N. C., who died at Fort Eustis Hospital.

Man Accused of Killing Tormentor for 3 Years

Reinertown, Pa., Dec. 10 (AP).—A 58-year-old Schuylkill County miner was charged today with the "thistle burr" slaying of a fellow miner.

Police said William Riskis fatally shot Stanley Russelavage, 52, American legionnaire, after Russelavage had covered Riskis' clothes with thistle burrs, and that the shooting was the outgrowth of three years of pranks perpetrated by Russelavage on Riskis.

'Foundation' Funds Said to Aid Reds

2 to 10 Years
Kendrick Sentenced In Assault

John A. Kendrick, 41, a down-at-the-heels gangster, drew a stiff jail sentence yesterday in District Court at almost the same amount he was losing $125 collateral in Municipal Court.

Kendrick, who was convicted of assault with a dangerous weapon last week because he took an unsuccessful pot-shot last June at Tommy English, admitted love rival and fellow gangster, was sentenced to serve from 3 to 10 years by District Court Justice Edward M. Curran.

Which means he can renew his friendship with English in the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va. English was sent there recently after beleng convicted of housebreaking.

Sentence Delayed

Justice Curran delayed the sentencing for several hours pending a report from Galinger Hospital on Kendrick's physical condition.

When Kendrick was brought into court yesterday morning, his attorney, James K. Hughes, mentioned that Kendrick had been told by a doctor at Gallinger that he might have a fractured skull, the result of a fracas which preceded Kendrick's arrest at Union Station recently on a drunk and disorderly conduct charge.

No Skull Fracture

Kegdrick had been admitted to the hospital the night of his arrest for treatment of alcoholism. Justice Curran passed sentence after receiving a report from Gallinger that Kendrick was treated only for alcoholism and there was no evidence of a skull fracture.

Defense Attorney Hughes had a busy day on behalf of his client. He also made an appearance in the Court of Municipal Judge Aubrey Fennell, where Kendrick was to face the charge of drunk and disorderly conduct. Judge Fennell at first refused to permit Hughes to forfeit $125 collateral for Kendrick, but withdrew his objection after Hughes and Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King had discussed the case.

Survey Planned In Anne Arundel

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—The University of Maryland will make an economic and governmental survey of Anne Arundel County similar to that made in Allegany County last year.

Senator Wilbur R. Dulin (D., Anne Arundel) said Governor Lane had given approval to the survey, which will be paid for by the university. It is expected to cost $6000.

Dulin said preliminary work had begun after the survey was recommended by the State Planning Commission, which studied the county government last year.

Tax League Assails Exempt Incomes At House Hearing

By Samuel W. Bell

Tax-exempt income from "foundations" frequently have been used to finance Communist front organizations, the House Ways and Means Committee was told yesterday during hearings on general revision of Federal tax laws.

The assertion was made by Leonard J. Calhoun, counsel for the National Tax Equality League. He also urged Congress to impose taxes on "billions" of income of trusts, unions, churches, schools and other "nonprofit" organizations.

"The misuse of the 'foundation' form of organization, both taxwise and otherwise," Calhoun said, "is well illustrated by the Marshall Foundation. This organization, according to evidence placed in the Congressional Record of September 24, 1942, by Representative Martin Dies (D., Tex.), and one-time chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, was found to be the principal source of funds for Communist fronts."

Object of Foundation

Noting that the foundation, established by the will of the late Robert Marshall, left $750,000 to be devoted "to the promotion and advancement of an economic system in the United States based on the theory of production for use rather than profit," Calhoun added:

"Earnings from this tax-exempt fund were used to finance the American Peace Mobilization and Farmer Educational and Cooperative Union of America, whose leaders were affiliated with the American Peace Mobilization. Dies also found that Communist activities prior to the establishment of the Marshall Foundation had been financed by the American Fund for Public Service, whose chief benefactor had been Charles Garand."

For example, Calhoun said, New York University now operates a profitable "spaghetti factory" and pays no taxes on it. Washington University in St. Louis, he declared, and Trinity Church of New York have wide real estate holdings. Union College of Schenectady, N. Y., owns a chain of department stores, and Yale University a department store in Philadelphia.

$5,000,000,000 Income

Calhoun said that Treasury figures showed tax-exempt organizations took in more than five million dollars in 1944, of which approximately three-fourths came from their "business activities in direct competition with private business."

Herbert F. Osteyee, manager of the American Baptist Publication Society of Philadelphia, Pa., told the committee the church organizations would "view with deep concern" any proposal to tax their income.

Another witness, John C. Beukman, secretary of the Muskegon, Mich., Chamber of Commerce, urged Congress not to undertake to tax accumulations of capital similar to the "Greater Muskegon Industrial Fund."

Accident Suit Seeks $25,000

A suit asking damages totaling $25,000 resulting from an auto accident was filed yesterday in District Court by Edward M. Mahoney of 629 Farragut st. nw., on behalf of himself and his daughter, Mary, 17.

Named defendants in the suit were William Hampton and Ralph M. Tolley, 19, both of 913 Crittenden st. nw.

According to the suit, the girl suffered a fractured right arm, cuts, bruises and shock on December 4 when the car in which she was riding struck a bridge rail on the grounds of Soldiers' Home.

The suit identifies Hampton as the owner of the car and Tolley as the driver at the time of the accident.

The suit asks $20,000 damages for the girl and $5000 damages for the father to compensate him for the loss of his daughter's services.

Union Trust Votes Extra Of 25 Cents

By S. Oliver Goodman

Directors of Union Trust Co. of Washington have declared an extra dividend of 2½ per cent, or 25 cents a share, in addition to the semiannual dividend of 5 per cent, or 50 cents a share on capital stock, President S. William Miller announced yesterday.

Allowing for the 5-for-1 stock splitup earlier this year when Citizens National Bank was acquired, this makes total dividends this year of $6.25 on the old $50 par stock as compared with $4 dividends in 1946.

The regular disbursement is payable January 15 to stock of record December 31, while the extra is payable December 19 to stock of record December 11. Union Trust directors also authorized a Christmas bonus for officers and employes.

Directors of the City Bank have declared a "wage dividend" of 2.41 per cent of base pay over a 10-year period, President Clarence F. Burton reported yesterday. If an employe's total wages for 10 years were $16,500, his base pay would be $1650 and the wage dividend would amount to $397.65, Burton explained. The plan was inaugurated last year, when the bonus amounted to 2 per cent. The wage dividend will vary annually according to the bank's earnings, Burton said.

Also, City Bank will inaugurate a life insurance and hospitalization plan for employes, starting January 1, he said. The bank will foot the entire cost.

Directors of National Savings & Trust Co. declared the usual quarterly dividend of $2 a share on capital stock, President Bruce Baird reported yesterday, payable February 2 to stock of record January 23.

AUTO SALES: Washington sales of new passenger cars and trucks totaled 2344 in November, compared with 2279 in the preceding month and 2172 in November, 1946, the Washington Automotive Trade Association reported yesterday. For the first 11 months this year new car sales aggregated 19,437, a gain of 38 per cent over the 14,016 in the same 1946 period.

BANK OFFICER: Mary E. Denton has been elected assistant secretary of National Savings & Trust Co., President Bruce Baird announced yesterday. Mrs. Denton, a graduate of Notre Dame Academy, held secretarial positions in Chattanooga before coming to Washington in 1936. Here she continued secretarial work with Thomas J. Fisher & Co. until 1943, when she became secretary to Baird.

'The Idea! Roll Back Wages! Jail Him,' Cries Red Queen

By J. A. Livingston

THE Walrus rapped on his tusk to bring the class to attention. "We're going to have a report from Alice on her trip to Congress," he announced. He turned to Alice. "Alice, did you listen to the hearings on President Truman's anti-inflation program?"

"Yes, I did," said Alice, "and the CIO's going to be an injured party."

"Explain," ordered the Walrus.

"Well," said Alice, "Bob Nathan, the CIO economic consultant, testified. He said Congress better roll back prices — and quick."

Livingston

"I see no injury in that," argued the Mad Hatter.

The Red Queen charged into the conversation. "You have no ear for politics," she declared. "Let me ask you a question: What chance is there that Bob Taft will let Congress roll back prices?"

"None."

"There," said the Red Queen, "I have you! That makes the CIO an injured party. It asks for something. That establishes its right to it. It doesn't get it. So it's injured. It's forced to seek its own relief. It demands a third round of wage increases. Q. E. D."

"I want to ask a question," said the Mad Hatter in a wee voice. "Everyone talks about rolling back prices. Why doesn't somebody talk about rolling back wages?"

A HUSH fell over the classroom. The Walrus beckoned to the Carpenter, whispered something in his ear, gave him a nickel, and sent him out of the room. The Red Queen was the first to answer. Her face was purple with rage.

"You're an obscene lout," she asserted. "Some things we never mention in polite society. Not even in Congress. Are you scheming for Philip Murray and Walter Reuther to lose their jobs?"

"You talk in riddles," said the Hatter.

"It's the System," suggested Alice softly. "If a labor leader were to let wages be rolled back, he'd be admitting he asked too much in the first place. That's impossible."

Replied the Mad Hatter: "I should think workers would be proud of him, first for being such a good bargainer and second for being man enough to admit an error."

The Red Queen shook her head despairingly. "You've never read Keynes, have you?"

"Have you?" asked the Hatter.

"Don't change the subject," shot back the Queen. She opened a book, turned a few pages, said, "Yes, here it is." And she read: "Every trade union will put up some resistance to a cut in money wages, however small.' So you see, that's the law. Those are the words of the master."

"I understand now," said the Hatter. "You can't roll back wages, but it's perfectly proper to roll back prices."

THIS TIME the Carpenter, who had come back to the room, took up the discussion. "That's not true either. It's plain to see you've never had to meet a union payroll. Theoretically, we can afford a price rollback. Practically, we can't. Suppose you're Phil Murray, or Bill Tobin, or some other labor leader. You get a wage boost. You're a hero. Prices go up—partly as the result. So you demand another wage boost. If you get it, you're a still bigger hero. So the higher prices go, the more wages you get, the more the merry-go-round, and the greater hero you are."

The Mad Hatter looked sad and weary. He was mopping his forehead. "I simply can't keep up with you," he mumbled.

"Few can," consoled Alice; "after all, this is inflation."

"I have one more question," said the Hatter. "Who benefits from all this?"

"We're not sure," said the Walrus. "Some say it's the farmer; some say it's the doctor and the dentist, who charge big bills—and collect. Some say it's the corporation. I think it's anybody who has goods to sell—and can push up prices fast."

"It makes me think of my youngster," said the Hatter. "He has a balloon. He blows it up and up and up. It gets so big I tell him to stop or it'll burst. He says, 'Just one more blow, please, Pop. It's so big now, one little blow more won't hurt.'"

JUST THEN, there's a clang on the street. Three men enter, carrying a strait jacket. Is the Mad Hatter mistaken in thinking they're Nathan, Bowles and Porter? Or are they Murray, Reuther and John L. Lewis? Anyway, they grab the Hatter.

"What's this all about?" he cries out. "Will no one help me?"

"No," says the Red Queen, "they're members of the Lunacy Commission. The Carpenter phoned for them. They have a warrant. It charges you with being mad, stark mad. You've suggested that wages be rolled back. There isn't a lawyer in the United States who'd defend you. I don't even think the National Association of Manufacturers would be so foolish as to propose that."

Verdict Ready On Bus Driver In Auto Death

A sealed verdict was returned last night by a Municipal Court jury in the trial of John A. Prezzi, 29-year-old Capital Transit bus driver charged with negligent homicide.

The verdict will be announced at 10 a. m. today by Judge Nathan Margold.

Prezzi's bus hit an automobile at 13th and Farragut sts. nw. February 15, killing Harriet Winslow, 15, of 15 E. Lenox st., Chevy Chase, Md. She was returning home from a prep school with Charles L. Goodrich, 16, of 4344 Forest lane nw. Goodrich, who was driving the auto, was seriously injured.

Although a coroner's jury exonerated both Prezzi and Goodrich at an inquest, the United States Attorney's office decided to prosecute Prezzi, who lives at 2424 N. Capitol st.

The three-day trial went to the jury at 4:45 p. m. yesterday after Pvt. Marion Frye testified the empty bus left on skid marks in tossing the car 81 feet.

Robert C. Owers, jr., 118 Woodlawn ave., Chevy Chase, and Michael Keane, 2917 Glover dr., nw., friends of the victims, testified they were following in a car behind Goodrich, witnessed the crash, and estimated the bus was traveling between 40 and 50 miles an hour.

In another Municipal Court jury trial, Chief Petty Officer Ralph H. Spring, 32, of the Bethesda Naval Medical Center, was convicted of drunken driving. He will be sentenced by Judge Thomas D. Quinn January 25.

According to police, Spring drove his car into a streetcar plow pit at Georgia ave. and Trumbull st. nw. November 15 while returning from the Maryland-North Carolina State football game at College Park, Md. During his trial, Spring admitted he had had "a few drinks" at the game.

$25,000 Asked For Blocking Garage Door

A Washington doctor yesterday asked $25,000 damages from a coal company because he claims they piled coal in front of his garage door.

The suit was filed in District Court by Dr. S. A. T. Austin of 2105 N st. nw. The coal company named is W. H. Hessick & Son, Inc., located at 14th st. and Maine ave. sw.

In his complaint, Dr. Austin declared that on a number of occasions during the past three years he has been unable to make emergency calls on his patients because of coal, as much as 5 or 6 tons, piled in front of his garage door.

Sometimes the coal would be left there for hours, the suit alleges, preventing Dr. Austin from using his car.

Because of this, Dr. Austin's suit says, he has suffered embarrassment, his income has been depleted, his reputation for punctuality has been ruined and his health impaired by worry.

Grand Jury To Get Meat Theft Case

William Henderson, 41, of 6664 Hillandale rd., Bethesda, Md., had his day in court yesterday.

It was a bad one.

Henderson was chased by a motorcycle policeman Monday night. When he was caught, the policeman found in his car about 500 pounds of meat which allegedly had been stolen from a Safeway stroe. Henderson was charged with housebreaking and six traffic violations.

Henderson went before Municipal Judge Armond Scott on the housebreaking charge yesterday morning, in connection with the Safeway burglary. Judge Scott ordered him held for the grand jury and set bond at $1000.

In the afternoon Henderson went before Municipal Judge John P. McMahon to answer to the traffic charges, four of which were nolle prossed.

However, Judge McMahon found Henderson guilty on the other two charges. He gave him a 60-day jail sentence for operating with a revoked permit and gave him the alternative of a $25 fine or 25 additional days in jail for speeding.

World Fliers End 25,162-Mile Trip

Evans, Truman Land at Jersey Airport After 123-Day Journey in Light Planes

Teterboro, N. J., Dec. 10 (AP).—Two flivver planes buzzed back to Teterboro Airport today to end a unique 25,162-mile flight around the world for Cliff Evans and George Truman.

They took off from this same field 123 days ago and hopped leisurely around the globe in the pint-sized, 100 horsepower cubs which carried them side by side to a total of 49 stops in 23 nations.

Their wives, both of the Washington, D. C., area, who had waited four months and a day since the two former Army pilots took off from here August 9, were the first to greet them as they touched down on the Teterboro runway at 10:10 a. m.

Evans, 27, and Truman, 39, who met while teaching student pilots, had made no attempt at any speed mark. The only record shattered by the leisurely flight was that for the size of the plants, their two Cubs being listed as the smallest aircraft ever to cross either ocean, as well as to circle the globe.

Truman told of typhoons and assorted weather difficulties which often threatened to cut short their flight, especially in the Pacific area. The wartime flight instructor and air transport command pilot said they had logged 281 flying hours, some 31 more than they had scheduled for the route.

They said the flight started as "just an idea," but later took on the more scientific note of testing the practicability of light planes.

The 1000-pound planes are listed at a gross maximum weight of 2180 pounds.

Lone sore spot of the trip, the fliers said, was the trail of I. O. U's which they had strung around the globe. With no active backers behind the flight, they said, they had been forced to resort to the use of credit cards for their gasoline requirements.

They ran up bills for some 1686 gallons of aviation gas, they said, and just who is going to pick up the tabs, they said, is still uncertain.

They had job offers all around the world, they said, but would accept none until they wrote a book about the trip. Mrs. Evans cut short any queries about her husband's future plans. "He's just going to keep away from airplanes awhile," she announced.

D. C. Welcome to Fliers Scheduled for Tuesday

Washington's welcome-home ceremonies for the round-the-world fliers, Cliff Evans and George Truman, are tentatively scheduled for Tuesday. They will be met at the airport when they land by officials of the Washington Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce, State Department, and various aviation groups.

At 3:45, according to the Board of Trade, they will be taken to the District Building, where they are scheduled to be welcomed by the District Commissioners, presented with memberships in Civil Air Patrol by Col. Robert L. Scott.

At 5 p. m., Evans, who lives at 1416 North Abingdon st., Arlington, and Trumon, of 4804 V st. se., will be taken to the Willard Hotel for a reception, to be followed by a dinner at the Statler Hotel sponsored by the Board of Trade.

Bubble Gun and Movie Passes Aid Arlington Safety Drive

Several thousand Arlington children are learning traffic safety "by the numbers" as members of the "1-2-3 GO" safety club.

The drive, being sparked by safety movies, lectures and the inducement of free bubble gum and movie passes, is sponsored by the Arlington Police Department with funds provided by the Arlington Kiwanis Club.

Club members are being urged to (1) look to the right, (2) look to the left, and (3) watch out for cars turning corners before they "GO" across the street.

County Traffic Safety Officer Frank Palmer so far has toured 12 Arlington schools, showing an "Our Gang" movie illustrating traffic safety and driving his points home with a safety lecture.

Children who agree to follow safety rules are enrolled in the club and given a colored club button. If Palmer spots a button wearing youngster on the streets who can answer a safety question put to him, the policeman gives him a free movie pass or some candy as reward.

Palmer, who said the drive would end next March with a party for school children judged the most safety-conscious by schoolboy patrols, added that he hoped adults would become familiar with the "Stop and Count, Live to Cross" motto, too.

'Pirates' Ranges The Spectrum

By Richard L. Coe

"PIRATES OF MONTEREY," at the Capitol, is one of those adventure yarns in which one becomes increasingly conscious of the varying hues the hair of Maria Montez achieves in glorious technicolor.

Miss Montez, who is one of the many ladies frequently described as "The Queen of Technicolor," presumably sprouts the same tresses throughout "Pirates of Monterey," but they certainly do achieve a fascinating variety of tints. In the broad daylight, when we first see her, the Montez locks are an enviable reddish gold. By the light of a campfire they switch to something of a chestnut brown. Other way stations on the spectrum are covered in the course of her characterization.

This is not to say, of course, that hair does not change its hue under varying lights. Even a person with the ratty shade like that topping your reporter's pate knows that with kindly, soft lighting, the results can be, if misleading, at least flattering.

If we seem preoccupied with the shades of the Montez hair in "Pirates of Monterey," lay that to a lack in the picture of anything else to which we might turn our interest. Apart from some fascinating variations of grays and greens in the skin of the the Montez throat, there is little remarkable in this well-meant salute to golden, democratic California.

The film begins with a brave foreword about the glowing deeds that brought the birth of that pearl of Statehood, California. Exactly what these pretentious words mean to convey isn't quite clear, for once the film begins you're back in that familiar movie yarn about how a man from Missouri, bringing arms to the patriots of California, quashes the plans of royalist Spain.

Rod Cameron plays the tall Yankee whose repeater rifles are destined for Spanish treachery. By chance he meets Miss Montez, who is on her way to marry his best friend, Philip Reed. Since Cameron is taller than Reed, love is born.

The rest of the picture is spent in making Philip understand that Maria and Rod were meant for each other, in aiding the democratic patriots to win out in California and in watching an excessively tiresome flirtation between Mikhail Rasumny and Tamara Shanye. All that proves is that Rasumny has captured the most undeserved film footage of the year.

Since Spanish was the language of those early Californians, "Pirates of Monterey" peppers its necessary English with such conversational gambits as "amigo," "hacienda," "buenas noches" and "buenos dias." Though these words are repeated incessantly, the film assumes no English subtitles are necessary.

Jack Carter, until recently comedian of "Call Me Mister," headlines the stage bill with topical banter, and Diana Courtney, one of the most fetching songbirds of radio, returns with a brace of tunes. Harold and Lola, snake dancers; the Mathis Duo, unicyclists, and Bob Simpson's sextette, complete the bill.

THE LITTLE ran into unlooked for booking trouble with "Storm in a Teacup," which it's been unable to get for the final week of that excellent Swedish film, "Torment." Instead, "Lifeboat," the Alfred Hitchcock-Tallulah Bankhead film, is in the spot. If you didn't see this one, you couldn't have a better chance to catch up.

"FOREVER AMBER" is making the Warner neighborhood rounds, going to the Calvert today and tomorrow. Next Tuesday Amber will be at the Sheridan for two days at the Silver Thursday and Friday, the 18th and 19th. The advanced prices, let us reiterate, aren't the fault of your local houses. No theater can show the pictures except at upped rates; that's what's called the film's "national policy."

THE ICE-CAPADES is holding its annual auditions today at Uline Arena—this afternoon at 3 and tonight at 11. Contestants must bring along their own skates. Supervising the auditions are Rosemarie Stewart and Robert Dench, the wife-husband precision team. You have to be at least 16 to apply. Women should be between 5 feet 5 and 5 feet 6; men from 5 feet 8 up. Several of the current Icecapeople got into the show through auditions—for lack of a better word—like these.

IT'S OFFICIAL now, that those Louis-Walcott fight pictures have broken the house record of Trans-Lux, a record, by the way, made only two weeks ago with the British royal wedding pictures. Before that the opening night crowds of a decade ago held the newsreel house record.

"PETER PAN" tonight plays a special performance for the under privileged children of the District High School. Though the official opening of this offering by the Children's Theater of Washington isn't till tomorrow night, tonight's should be a very special preview.

Clouds Bar Photos Of Southern Comet

Meteorites in Tail May Rain on Earth, Astronomer Says

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 10 (AP).—Cloudy skies tonight prevented astronomers at Commonwealth Observatory in Canberra from photographing a strange new comet with a 40-million-mile tail which has flamed across southern skies for three nights.

Dr. Richard Wooley, observatory director, described the comet as the brightest he had ever seen.

Sky watchers at Auckland, New Zealand, more fortunate than observers here, said tonight that the comet's orange nucleus and the brighter portion of the tail were seen easily at 8:30 p. m. The tail extended vertically from the horizon, and as the twilight waned it spread like a plume, curving toward the south.

Observers in Melbourne who had field glasses said the comet had a bright head and long spraying tail which appeared with the setting of the sun at 8 p. m. and seemed to gain brightness at intervals.

$1,222,487 Allocated for Area Roads

State and Federal appropriations totaling $1,222,487 have been allocated to four nearby Virginia counties for secondary road improvements in the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1948.

A report released yesterday by the State highway department listed $20,079,676 in proposed expenditures for the entire State. Of the total, $17,971,641 will be appropriated by the State, while $2,108,035 represents Federal contributions.

Of the nearby counties, the largest allocation was granted Fairfax, which will receive $392,299 in State and Federal aid. Fauquier County will receive $340 131; Loudoun, $296,718, and Prince William, $193,339.

According to officials at the Culpeper district office of the State highway department, all the nearby apropriations represent "slight increases" over sums approved for the current fiscal year.

Specific road programs have not been prepared by any of the four counties, which will conduct public hearings to determine the most urgently needed projects before taking final action.

The total approved for the State will be divided about equally among eight highway districts. Excluded from the list is Arlington, which voted in 1932 to maintain its own road system from local taxation.

Legion to Hold Dance

Kenna-Main Post 37, American Legion, will sponsor a Christmas dance tomorrow at 9 p. m. at St. Elizabeth's Hospital. Proceeds will purchase toys and clothing for needy children.

Ex-Carrier Sues Post for $11,777

James H. Vermillion of Warrenton, Va., former newspaper carrier, yesterday filed suit in District Court here asking $11,777.77 damages from The Washington Post. He charged the newspaper refused to reinstate him upon his return from military service three years ago.

P. Michael Cook, attorney representing Vermillion, said his client was under contract with The Washington Post when he entered military service, January 1, 1944. Honorably discharged on December 2 of that year, Vermillion applied for his old route within five days, Cook said. This was refused, the suit contends.

John J. Corson, circulation director of The Washington Post, however, said yesterday that Vermillion was not an employe of The Washingotn Post but an independent contractor. When Vermillion went into service, Corson said, the contract was let to another party. Upon his return he was offered other routes but refused them, Corson explained.

The damages sought, according to Cook, represent the amount Vermillion would have earned between December 7, 1944 and yesterday less Vermillion's income from other jobs during that period.

Navy Soon to Lose Two Top Scientists By Retirement

NAVY: It will soon lose two of its top-ranking scientists—in fact, two of the best and most successful in the world. They are:

Dr. A. Hoyt Taylor, outstanding developer of radar in this country, who plans to retire some time next spring after he completes a history he's writing for the Navy on his work in radio, radar, and electronics, and,

Dr. Harvey C. Hayes, an international authority on underwater sound, who will retire this month.

ordinator for electronics at the laboratory, and Dr. Hayes is superintendent of its sound division, a position he had held since the laboratory was created nearly 25 years ago.

Dr. Hayes is the inventor of the sonic depth finder, a device which measures the ocean depth by sound waves. He holds 40 patents on this device. He also helped to develop sonar, used by the Navy during the war to locate German submarines.

Dr. Hayes holds the distinguished civilian service award from the Navy and various medals from private scientific organizations for his accomplishments. His Navy citation reads, in part:

"For distinguished achievement in analyzing the problems underlying the application of effective anti-submarine measures in World War II, and for outstanding leadership in the development and design of countermeasure equipment."

In other words, if it hadn't been for Dr. Hayes and his crew of scientists here, the Nazis might have won the war with their submarines. But in developing methods to seek out and destroy the submarines, Dr. Hayes and his staff shortened the war and saved tens of thousands of Allied lives.

A farewell party is to be given Dr. Hayes tonight by the staff at the research laboratory. Dr. Hayes entered the Government during World War I.

Everyone is familiar with radar and the vital part it played in winning the war. And much of the credit for its goes to another Navy civilian—Dr. Taylor, who holds many awards for his distinguished service.

Dr. Taylor said yesterday that he was now eligible to retire, but that he first wanted to complete his historical writings for which he had never the opportunity nor the time before. He said he's also looking forward to the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the Naval Research Laboratory here which will be celebrated next June. Needless to say, the Navy will gladly give Dr. Taylor all the time he needs to complete his work. I'll have a more detailed story on Dr. Taylor's services when he does decide to retire.

Both Drs. Taylor and Hayes have stayed in Government to serve their country and their fellow man. Undoubtedly, both could have made fortunes in private industry.

But both men, like all other Federal workers, have had to take the slurs and acid ridicule of being called bureaucrats, tax-eaters, loafers, and whatnot—adjectives that tend to discourage many potential Drs. Taylors and Hayes from either entering Government work or staying in it.

However, Drs. Taylor and Hayes have the personal satisfaction of knowing that they have contributed much more to their country than the loud-mouth critics of everything and everybody in Government.

PAY RAISE: Senators Langer (R., N. Dak.) and Chavez (D., N. Mex.) yesterday introduced their bills to raise the salaries of most Federal employes by $1000 each. Langer, the chairman of the Senate Civil Service Committee, promised to call early hearings on the measure. Langer said:

"Some Federal people are getting as little as $90 a month. In some instances the wives of employes have had to go to work in order to keep pace with the high cost of living. If we can provide billions for aid abroad we can at least take care of our own people first."

VA: Veterans Administration has openings here for 75 grade 2 and 3 stenographers and typists. Get further information in Room 2056 of the Munitions Building.

LABOR: Agriculture's farm labor program will be transferred to the Labor Department the end of this month. Labor will merge the program with its United States Employment Service. However, Labor will have very little money available to continue the farm program.

NOTES: Col. F. W. ImMasche is the new assistant director of Agriculture's livestock branch. Also at Agriculture, A. J. Loveland is the new director of its conservation program. He formerly was chairman of the Iowa State PMA committee.

Man Held in Auto Theft After 6-Hour Wait, Chase

'Armed Robbery' Report Brings Reinforcements In Cars, Motorcycles

A six-hour wait in an apartment lobby, a foot chase with drawn revolvers, with reinforcements in eight police cars and on five motorcycles featured the arrest of a car thief yesterday.

When two precinct detectives, John G. Williams and Charles I. Smith, assigned to the auto theft squad, started cruising at 6 a. m., three hours before they were supposed to start work, their eagerness was rewarded. They spotted a 1947 Chevrolet, with a cracked front window in front of 1000 N st. nw.

Checking back, the two officers learned that the car had been stolen from Price W. Kaier, 1929 16th st. nw., more than two weeks ago. The two men hid in a lobby near by until atfer noon when a man came out of the house at 1000 N st. nw. and started to get in the car.

Man Is Recognized

Williams and Smith said they recognized him as a man who had eluded them earlier as a car-theft suspect, and took after him with dlrawn service revolvers and much shouting.

An eagle-eyed citizen, not knowing what was going on, telephoned police that an armed robbery was in progress, and police broadcast the alarm to all available cars.

No sooner had the two detectives caught their man, than two headquarters cars, six scout cars and four motorcycles raored up.

When things were straightened out, the car thief was arrested and charged with grand larceny. According to police, he was identified as James Miller, 36, of 1810 7th st. nw., who readily admitted the theft, plus two other car thefts since October 11.

During th day police arrested five suspects in the wake of reports by seven persons that they were robbed of more than $450.

Napoleon Staunton, 23, of 39 Massachusetts ave. nw., was charged with the yoke robbery of Henry Robinette, 29, of Williamson, W. Va. Robinette said he lost $100, a $25 watch and three cans of sausage and sardines to three thugs in the 1200 block of 6½ st. nw. Police, still searching for the two accomplices, said the food was recovered, not the cash.

Two women were arrested on description after Robert L. Bracy, 20, a sailor stationed at Annapolis, Md., complained he was "rolled" of $160 by two women he had met in a bar in the 1700 block of 7th st. nw.

Harold Richards, 34, of 806 Dixon ct. sw., was charged with robbing Marie C. Thornton, 901 Rhode Island ave., of $37 while she was standing near a ticket window in Union Station.

Three Juveniles Accused

Juvenile papers were filed against a 17-year-old youth accused of attempting to rob Ernest Kennedy, 27, of 1413 Montello ave. ne. Kennedy reported three youths chased him from the 1200 block of 7th st. nw. to the 100 block of New York ave. nw., where they attempted to yoke and rob him. The two accomplices were being sought.

Other robbery victims were Mrs. Cora Smith, 58, of 57 Farragut st. nw., and Mary A. Johnson, 3514 13th st. nw. Mrs. Smith told police a man snatched her pocketbook containing $9 while she walked in an alley from 1st st. to New Hampshire ave. Police charged Odell Gregory, 21, 1427 Simms dr. se., with the robbery. Mrs. Johnson reported two youngsters snatched her pocketbook containing $22 while she was walking in the 1800 block of 8th st. nw.

Theft of $500 in $20 bills from a cedar chest was reported by Mattie Frye, 57, of 2527 M st. nw.

A barber's chair, weighing 400 pounds and valued at $250, was reported by Patrick Thalis as stolen from the American Beauty & Barber Supply Co. warehouse, 733 7th st. nw.

Fur Coat Stolen

Miss Bettye Jayne Brown, 4424 Alabama ave. se., said her lamb fur coat valued at $75, a pocketbook and makeup kit, worth more than $50, were stolen by a sneak thief from 5008 Hanna pl. se.

Lenore Browne told police $63 in cash and a $25 bond were stolen from her office desk at the Board of Public Welfare Building, 462 Indiana ave. nw.

Three radios worth more than $60, Robert Coble complained, were stolen from the Mid-City Radio Shop, 1142 7th st. nw., by a burglar who broke the show window.

Clothes valued at $75 were stolen from a third-floor apartment at 1121 I st. nw., Arnold Ezell reported. Police were holding a 34-year-old man whose arrest led to recovery of most of the items.

Unionist Accuses Arlington Of Fostering 'Strike-Breaking'

The Arlington County Government yesterday was accused of siding with owners of the huge Fairlington, Va., housing project, as a strike of AFL maintenance crews there continued into its third day.

John Goodman, international vice president of the Building Service Employes Union, charged County authorities with fostering "strike-breaking" by ordering trash and garbage collection equipment into the project, which is on the edge of Arlington County, partly in Fairfax County.

He held that "responsibility for maintaining health standards" rests with the Fairmac Corp., owners, and claimed the county government has, by its action, "supported" the firm's "obstinate" refusal to deal with the union.

Tells of Resolution

Lawrence Michael, a member of the Arlington Republican Committee, said the organization passed a resolution, which he introduced, criticizing the county manager for "acting as a strike breaker by furnishing county equipment" to Fairlington.

Arlington County Manager Albert T. Lundberg, asked for comment, said:

"The work done by the Arlington County Government was a health measure of a temporary nature."

He added that the equipment assigned to the project for clean-up purposes would be removed "as soon as the management has taken care of the situation."

Sanitary Engineer R. M. Wirt announced that the county's trucks and workers would continue their operations at Fairlington today but "beyond that I cannot say." He said "we won't be able to spare them much longer."

Charles Prins, public relations representative for the Fairmac Corp., reiterated earlier assurances that "sufficient replacements are now on the job to ensure uninterrupted service." A check with few have been inconvenienced by the strike of some 170 workers, except in some cases of minor delays in collection of garbage.

Meantime, the dispute was a stalemate, with the union pledged to continue the walkout until management "agrees to meet with us" and the owners insisting there is no posibility a meeting will be called.

Goodman, international officer of the union, reported eight maintenance workers at the project, which houses more than 14,000, left their jobs yesterday to join the strikers. But the management said it "could find nothing at all to verify that."

Final Appeal Issued in Chest Drive

Plea Directed to 50,000 Non-Repeat Givers; Last Report Luncheon Set Today

"Do your share in caring for those in need here in the Nation's Capital." This last-minute appeal came yesterday from leaders in the bogged-down Community Chest Federation campaign for $3,900,000.

Volunteers prepared to turn in reports at the drive's last luncheon meeting, scheduled for 12:15 p. m. today in Hotel Annapolis.

Campaign Chairman Edward H. Foley, jr., urged those who have not been solicited to call headquarters, Metropolitan 2284, at once. Special crews are available to call immediately at homes which have not been covered.

The campaign now rcords a dficit of $812,278.

Foley said that "'n the 30-day drive we have produced some 50,000 fewer gifts this year than we obtained in 1946" but admitted that "many of these 50,000 people we know have not had the opportunity to give."

"It is to these people I appeal most earnestly to telephone at once to campaign headquarters for a solicitor," he added.

He urged that they either phone for a volunteer to call for their pledge or write out a check, addressed to the Community Chest Federation, 1101 M st., n.w.

With only 79.17 per cent of necessary funds on hand, a spokesman for the Chest-supported agencies declared:

"It would be nothing short of catastrophic to fail to meet . . . needs of this community. For the community as a whole, it will be costly in terms of money, much more money than the provision of preventive services. In terms of human values the cost cannot be measured."

The 125 Chest-supported agencies supply welfare, health and recreation services to residents of the entire National Capital area on a year-'round basis.

Physicians Group To Discuss Civil Rights in Medicine

A discussion of "Civil Rights in Medicine" will be held at 8:30 p. m., Monday, at the Y.W.C.A., 614 E st. nw., by The Physicians Forum. Efforts to open Gallinger Hospital to Negro physician training, and national compulsory health insurance will be topics.

Dr. W. Montague Cobb, of Howard University, will talk on the Gallinger situation. Dr. Herman Kabat, of the Kabat-Kaiser Institute, 2633 16th st. nw., will champion health insurance.

Increase in Phone Rates Seen at PUC Hearing

District Preparing for Snow With Sand, Signs, Manpower

The Washington Post

WINTER REMINDER—Two members of a sign crew of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic post "snow parking" signs on Georgia ave. nw., yesterday in anticipation of forthcoming wintry weather. The workmen are Russell Henry (left), of Vienna, Va., and Leonard L. Johnson of 1447 Fairmont st. nw.

The sand barrels are filled, the "snow-parking" signs are being installed, and the shovelers and and drivers are being mobilized.

More than 4000 of the signs forbidding parking between 2 a. m. and 7 a. m. will be placed along 73 miles of heavy-traffic streets. The snow-parking bar is in effect between December 15 and March 15.

The mobilization of snow-clearing, sand-spreading manpower includes 2200 men.

According to William A. Xanten, superintendent of the Division of Sanitation, if this is an average winter, the District will spend $80,000 because of the snow.

Traffic Director George E. Keneipp cautioned the public to slow down during snow. He said that in many snowbelt areas last winter, nearly 65 per cent of all traffic mishaps occurred on snowy or icy road surfaces.

"Drivers must learn to adjust speeds to conditions and take every precaution when severe snow and ice conditions prevail, slow down well in advance of intersection and curves, maintain safe distances between vehicles, signal intention of turning or stopping, use tire chains and be sure of ability to see and stop," Keneipp said.

The snow-parking signs are being posted by a crew of 15 men along 46 streets. The crew began working Monday, and shauld be through tomorrow night, according to William H. Voltz, operations engineer for the Division of Traffic and Vehicles. He estimated that the signs originally cost $1 each, cost 23 cents each for installation, and 40 cents for reconditioning.

Gain of $2,018,000 In Annual C. & P. Revenue Expected

An increase in telephone rates in the District was indicated yesterday as hearings were completed before the Public Utilities Commission. The increased revenue is expected to be some $2,018,000 a year.

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. has requested a new schedule of rates which would increase the basic single party line cost, the most widely used type, by 55 cents a month, from $4.20 to $4.75.

A telephone rate increase, ranging from 25 cents to $1.75 went into effect in Maryland September 1 and the Virginia State Corporation Commission is now consdering a proposed jump there which would add 25 cents a month to resdential subscribers' bills.

Special Corporation Counsel Lloyd Harrison, after conducting a searching examination of company income from long distance calls, summoned V. A. McElfresh, PUC executive accountant and auditor, as the vnal witness in the three-day hearing.

Accountants Checked Records

The auditor said he had assigned four accountants to check company operations and on the basis of their report, he felt that even with the granting of the proposed increases, the firm's earnings on investment would rise only to 4.4 per cent.

PUC officials, although declining to comment on what their final decision would be, noted that the Potomac Electric Power Co. has been authorized rates bringing 5.5 per cent returns and the Washington Gas Light Co. a 6 per cent return.

McElfresh testified that although the C. & P. accounting practices followed PUC policies in general, he challenged the accuracy of several items.

His principal criticism was aimed at the 1½ per cent of gross receipts charge made by American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which owns C. & P., for various services. He declared that, in effect, the local firm is paying not only for services rendered but also for expenses incurred by A. T. & T. in its role as a holding company, and specified several items.

Detailed Study of Returns

McElfresh said his staff had made a detailed study of the investment and returns earned by C. & P. for the four months ending October 31, and on the basis of that, computed present returns at 2.65 per cent. Even if the criticized 1½ per cent charge was completely wiped out, the firm's present returns would move only to 3.42 per cent, he said, indicating that his criticism was more in the nature of suggestion, rather than outright opposition to the increase.

The company's attorney, William Gassaway, then waived the right to cross-examine with the comment that none of the items under fire would have sufficient weight to affect the decision on the proposed rate increases. He said the firm considered the jumps "reasonable and fair."

In the first part of the hearing, which was held October 20, the C. & P. declared that its rate of return for the 12 months ending September 30, 1947, had been slipping steadily from 4.85 at the beginning of the period to 2.37 for the final quarter.

The hearing was adjourned subject to recall of People's Counsel John O'Dea. The attorney for the Bureau of Federal Supply, Treasury Department, Byron E. Harding, waived further questioning.

Early Day 'Speeder' Debunks Past Era

So far as the traffic problem in Washington goes, there probably never were any good-old days.

At least, that is what Mrs. Eleanor Kirwan, who is aiding in running the jingle contest for the Traffic Division gathers from a letter at her home office received yesterday from Herman C. Gauss, 1322 Emerson st. nw.

Gauss submitted the following jingle:

"When the sun goes down, accidents rise
Dusk plays tricks on drivers' eyes;
So if you have to drive at night
Check your speed and help your sight."

Then, he related that in 37½ years of driving here he has been given but two tickets. The first, he said, he received in 1920 when there were still Stanley Steamers and SelfStarting Everetts chugging along.

He writes that he was stopped by an officer who claimed he was going 21 miles an hour on East Potomac Park. At the time, Gauss said, the speed limit in downtown Washington was 12 miles an hour. In the parks, however, there was an unofficial limit of 15 to 18 miles an hour, he said.

"When I told the officer that a foot-propelled bicycle practicing for a bicycle race had passed me very fast, the officer replied, 'the law does not include bicycles'," Gauss wrote.

He added, "I never hit a car, person, cow, dog or other animal."

He faces a $500 fine or 6 months in jail or both.

Gun Wounds Chief

Henry J. Nebel, 33, recently appointed Bladensburg, Md., police chief, was wounded accidentally by his own service revolver yesterday.

Police reported the .38-caliber pistol, which was lying on the front seat of a police cruiser, was discharged when Nebel and two 15-year-old boys entered the car. The bullet struck the police chief just above the right knee, resulting in a compound fracture of the leg.

The boys, Walter Trunnel, 4109 34th ave., Bladensburg, and Donald Leslie, 5404 Defense hwy., Bladensburg, had gone with Nebel to the county incinerator on Kenilworth ave. near River rd., to obtain some cardboard to be used for pistol targets. According to police, Nebel left the gun on the seat when he got out of the car.

Nebel was admitted to Prince Georges County Hospital, where his condition was described as good last night.

A member of the force for several years, Nebel was appointed as its head about a month ago when the position of chief was created by the town council after Bladensburg was enlarged through incorporation with two adjacent communities. He lives at 4301 54th ave., Decatur Heights.

She had never entered a contest, she said, until she discovered three months ago that she might win the model home set up on 14th st. nw. across from the Commerce Building by writing the snappiest last line of a jingle.

Foretold War To Roosevelt, Benes Writes

By Maurice Hindus

Prague, Dec. 10.—President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia told the late President Roosevelt on May 29, 1939, that war would break out any day after July 15 of that year, with Poland as the first victim, and Mr. Roosevelt, in reply to a question as to what the United States would do, said it would have to participate because Europe alone could not defeat Adolf Hitler.

The conversation between Benes and Mr. Roosevelt, which took place in Hyde Park, N. Y., and lasted three and a half hours, is disclosed in the Czechoslovak President's memoirs, 175,000 copies of which have sold since the book was published October 27.

Benes, according to the memoirs, told Mr. Roosevelt that within two weeks after the war started the Germans would be in Warsaw and that within six weeks the Polish campaign would be over.

In response to a further question from Mr. Roosevelt, Benes stated that Belgium and Holland would be drawn into the conflict and small nations lying between Russia and Germany would be overrun, so that Hitler would find himself face to face with Russia.

"What will the Soviet Union do?" asked Mr. Roosevelt.

"It will fight in the end," Benes replied.

"On which side?"

"On our side, of course."

Benes further informed Mr. Roosevelt the war would last a long time and would be accompanied by frightful losses.

Considering that Czechoslovakia has a population of only a little more than 12 million, the memoirs' sales figures are remarkable. For Czechs, the book is more than a record of the seven most crucial years in their history.

Benes speaks not only to, but for, his people. He makes them realize that pre-Munich Czechoslovakia, as well as pre-Munich Europe, are dead beyond anyone's power to resurrect them, and that Czechoslovakia must meet the new age of social and economic democracy firmly, boldly, but without battle and without blood.

14 War Dead Are Reinterred In Ceremonies at Arlington

Bodies of 14 World War II dead, including five from Greater Washington, were reinterred yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery.

Final tribute was paid the fallen servicemen, all Army dead from the European theater, in religious and military services at 2 p. m. at the grave sites.

The brief ceremonies were opened with solemn music by the United States Army Band. Services were conducted by Chaplains J. H. August Borleis of the Military District of Washington and William R. Fitzgerald of Fort Myer.

An eight-man firing party, body bearers and escorts for next of kin were furnised by the Fort Myer Ceremonial Detachment. Next of kin were presented flags which had covered the caskets, following the services.

Widened H St. Opens Today, 20 Days Ahead of Schedule

As far as merchants along 14th sts. are concerned, Santa can take a back seat this Christmas for Highway Director H. C. White-hurst.

Captain Whitehurst announced yesterday that the newly-paved and widened section of H st. ne., between 2nd and 13th sts., will be opened to traffic for the first time this morning.

Murray Schwarzman, secretary of the Northeast Business Men's Association, said the merchants were "positively overjoyed" that the street improvement had been completed in time to bring patrons to their stores for the Christmas shopping season.

"We have nothing but praise for the Highway Department, for the speed with which they completed it," Schwarzman beamed. "They're really ahead of schedule."

20 Days Ahead of Schedule

Whitehurst said the Donaldson Paving Co., which began work September 2, had completed the $193,912 project 20 days ahead of schedule.

The new section is 60 feet wide, contains four full traffic lanes. Extra 3½-foot widths have been provided for location of "out-of-traffic" stops to be used by Capital Transit Co. when it substitutes buses for streetcars on the eastern end of the Rosslyn-Benning line.

CTC President E. D. Merrill said the company expects to begin bus service on the line March 28.

Whitehurst said the pavement had been planned so that two more traffic lanes can be installed in "perfect contour" when the streetcar tracks are removed.

For the interim, the Public Utilities Commission yesterday ordered 16 streetcar stops in the 2d, 4th, 6th, 8th, 11th, 13th and 14th sts. Beginning December 13, eastbound buses will leave a terminal near 41st st. and Davis pl. nw., travel east on Davis pl. to 39th st., south on 39th to Benton st., east on Benton to Tunlaw rd., south on Tunlaw and 37th st. to S st., east on S to 35th st., south on 35th to Q st.

Trade Parley Studies 800 Pact Changes

Havana, Dec. 10 (AP).—The amendment-ridden Havana Trade Conference, snarled over basic clashes of opinion which seem almost irreconcilable, still has a good chance of writnig a charter for an international trade organization acceptable to most of the 58 nations attending, the parley's executive secretary said today.

Eric Wyndham White based this contention on the belief most delegations relize "this perhaps may be the last chance to write a world charter of economic peace."

Delegations, taking a day off from the committee hearings to study the amendments—White put the "box score now" at 800—were seeking to single out those they could not accept from those on which they might compromise.

Argentina has said it could not accept present charter provisions which give ITO the right to pass on trade practices. It demands that ITO pewers be limited to recommendations.

The United States delegation had made it plain it will accept no ITA charter "with all the teeth drawn."

Also, the United States delegates favor a strong ITO, even if only a few belong, to one weakened to leave every one freedom of action in making its own trade restrictions.

White, however, told a press conference:

"If a significant minority objects to the charter, then the purposes of an international trade organization probably cannot be realized. We must have substantial agreement on the principle points if the conference is to succeed."

Court Asked to Save Baltimore Trolleys

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—Wilson C. Warren asked the Court of Appeals today to prevent the Baltimore Transit Co. from abandoning 77 miles of street car lines and replacing them with buses.

His attorneys, Herbert E. Witz and J. Morfit Mullen sought an injunction which was denied by Judge John T. Tucker in Baltimore City Circuit Court.

The petition was based on the contention that the transit company's directors had no right to abandon "about 24 million dollars of assets devoted to its charter purpose of operating a street railway" to purchase "about 12 million dollars worth of free wheel motor buses and equipment" on its credit in the name of a wholly owned subsidiary corporation.

Witz argued the stockholders would have to approve such a fundamental change, and chiefly that the board did not have the power to make the change.

In reply, Attorney Harry Baetjer, speaking for the transit company, said the transit company "must transfer or go bust."

Sergt. Hirsch to Play

Mrs. J. W. Cole Dies of Burns While Dozing

Mrs. Helen W. Cole, 45, died of burns last night when her clothing became ignited while she dozed in a chair in her apartment at 3500 13th st. nw.

Police said that a lighted cigarette apparently started the fire. She was pronounced dead at Garfield Hospital at 7:05 p. m.

The fire was discovered, police said, by 12-year-old Betty Gilroy, who smelled the smoke. The child is the daughter of Mrs. Elva Gilroy, who lives on the floor below the Cole apartment.

Mrs. John H. Houston, apartment manager, pulled the apartment alarm box at 6:18 p. m. after she was summoned by the Gilroy girl.

The overstuffed arm chair in which she was believed to have been sitting was destroyed, police said.

D. C. Planners To Hear Case For Airpark

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission will consider today and tomorrow whether it will recommend building an airpark for private flying.

Convening for its regular two-day meeting, the commission will hear a report from its coordinating committee. It will learn the views of the Washington Aviation Planning Council tomorrow morning.

If it decides favorably, it will name a site. Kingman Island, straddling imaginary East Capitol st. in the Anacostia River, has been mentioned prominently.

Also on the NCPPC schedule is a luncheon meeting today with officials of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the commissioners of Montgomery and Prince Georges counties. The meeting, similar to one held with nearby Virginia officials last month, will deal with mutual planning problems. In Maryland, NCPPC is considering acquisition of new park lands and possible development of areas at the Bethesda National Institute of Health at Suitland.

W. E. Reynolds, Commissioner of Public Buildings, will appear before NCPPC tomorrow morning to discuss plans for the new Federal courthouse at Constitution ave. and 3d st. nw., development of the Great Plaza on 14th st. between Pennsylvania and Constitution aves. nw., and expansion at the National Institute of Health.

Gambling and Liquor Charges Hold 5

The police vice squad yesterday arrested four men and one woman in three separate raids on charges varying from operating a lottery to selling whiskey without a license.

Earliest raid was at 12:50 a. m., when the squad entered the Chauffers Social Club on the third floor of 706 O st. nw. and arrested William H. Chapman, 23, of 620 O st. nw. and Luvinie Thompson, 33, of 1329 8th st. nw., and charged them with keeping and selling liquor without a license. The two are to appear before a Municipal Court jury on January 12. They are free on $500 bond each.

The next raid, approximately 12 hours later, was on the janitor's quarters at 2310 Connecticut ave., where police took into custody Otis Padgett, 36, charged with operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips. Padgett's bond was set at $1500. He is to appear before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage today.

Arrested on similar charges two hours later were Henry E. Fish, 54, of 1007 K st. nw. and George Verroso, 50, of 3200 10th st. ne. The arrest took place on the 3d floor of 409 10th st. nw. Lieut. Roy Blick, vice squad head, said the men were taken into custody only after several plays had been made by undercover agents. Blick said that Fish was the collector, and Verroso a "curbstone writer." Seized were money envelopes, number slips, race horse slips and grand national sweepstakes tickets. The men had $600 on them which was not taken by police, Blick said.

Nats Get Top Infield Prospect in Spence Deal

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The most mystified club in the American League when the cash-seeking St. Louis Browns sold Johnny Berardino to Cleveland was the rich Detroit Tigers. They thought they would own Berardino by nightfall, but they reckoned without Mr. Richard Muckerman.

POVICH

Muckerman was making no secret of his quest for cash in unloading seven of the Browns' regulars, and for Berardino the Tigers offered $75,000, confident that would fetch him. To the amazement of Detroit, the Browns sold Berardino to Cleveland for $50,000 and Outfielder Metkovich.

How come? The Tigers learned later that Muckerman was nursing a peeve against them. Detroit had made it plain some time back when the Browns were seeking a loan from the American League that it would block the attempt, which needed unanimous consent by the other clubs. Muckerman had that in his craw when he told his business manager, Bill DeWitt, to "sell no players to Detroit."

Even in the Browns' desperate need for cash, Muckerman took hearty delight in scorning the Tigers' dough and dealing with a Cleveland club that offered him less.

MUCKERMAN has not distinguished himself by his operation of the Browns since buying the controling interest from Don Barnes in 1945. He overexpanded in the minor leagues and was driven first to huge loans and later to selling off the few stars he owned to satisfy the bankers, and further weaken an eighth-place club.

But Barnes could have told the Detroit concern not to snub Muckerman and expect no retaliation. Muckerman was a co-owner of the Browns with Barnes in 1944, the year they won the pennant, and St. Louis was in a frenzy over the Browns-Cardinals World Series.

When Muckerman and his family betook themselves to Sportsman's Park for the opening series game, he discovered Barnes had allotted him tickets in the upper deck, quite unbecoming a co-owner. He stomped out of his seat, sought out Barnes, dressed him down, and said "I'm buying you out." And he did.

PRESIDENT BILL VEECK of the Indians is in a commanding position following his acquisition of Berardino, whom he needs about as much as a hole in the head. Berardino isn't going to replace Joe Gordon at second base and there is no other job on the Indians open to him, but Veeck leaped at the chance to buy him nevertheless.

Unquestionably, Veeck is trading on the infield miseries of the Detroit club, which does need Berardino at second base. The shrewd Cleveland owner knows that he can peddle Berardino to the Tigers any minute he is of that mind for the starting pitcher the Indians need so desperately.

Any day now, Veeck expects to come up with Dizzy Trout or Virgil Trucks, the Detroit starters, who are on the market, in a swap for Berardino. With the Detroit club uninterested in cash, and Veeck owning no trading material until he acquired Berardino, the way is now nicely opened for Cleveland to get the pitcher he wants.

IN STAN SPENCE, the Red Sox have acquired the player most booed by Boston fans in recent years. Fenway Park fans have taunted Spence with the chant "I'm as good as Dom DiMaggio," the utterance by Spence when he was sold down the river to Washington by the Red Sox in 1941.

To the dismay of Boston fans, Spence wasn't far wrong, however, in that boast. With the Nats, Spence frequently ruined Red Sox pitching at Fenway Park and took delight in the doing. The Red Sox apparently are welcoming him back, with gusto, else they would not have given up their sensational rookie second baseman, Al Kozar, in the swap.

Back in 1941, Spence was a throw-in in the deal that also brought Pitcher Jack Wilson from Boston to Washington in the exchange for Pitcher Ken Chase and Outfielder Johnny Welaj. Originally, the deal didn't include him. Clark Griffith asked for something more and Boston gave him Spence with no sense of loss. Spence was the only player in the quartet to prove a good one.

Bosox Send Al Kozar, Culberson To Griffs

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

New York, Dec. 10.—At the cost of Outfielder Stan Spence, who goes to the Boston Red Sox, the Nats today gained title to a rookie second baseman named Al Kozar of considerable minor league fame.

From the Washington club's viewpoint, Kozar was the chief consideration in the deal that also brought Outfielder Leon Culberson from the Red Sox in the swap for Spence.

Kozar, who batted .340 for New Orleans in the Southern Association, where the Red Sox placed him for seasoning last year, is labeled as some kind of a four-alarm wonder by big league talent hunters.

Five Clubs Wanted Him

Baseball men on every hand at the major league meetings are acclaiming Kozar as the "best-looking infielder in the minor leagues," and the Red Sox declare that they turned down offers from five major league clubs for him.

"The Detroit club offered us $50,000 for Kozar and would have gone higher," declared General Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox. "If we didn't have Bobby Doerr at second base, we'd never let Kozar get away from us."

Kozar is 25 years old, a husky 180-pounder who ostensibly brings right-handed batting power to the Nats. Two years ago at the Red Sox farm at Scranton in the Eastern League, he batted .316 and drove in more runs than Mele, the league's most valuable player.

Of Slavish extraction, Kozar is a Pittsburgh native from the rough-and-ready McKees Rock section of the city. He was a leading figure in Pittsburgh's semipro baseball, football, basketball ranks before joining the Army. He made good quickly with Scranton.

Cronin Praises Him

"In our training camp last spring, Kozar was making double plays as well as Bobby Doerr," declared Cronin. "The Washington club won't have any more second base troubles with him on the job."

Despite the loss of Spence, a consistent .300 hitter and perhaps the fanciest center fielder in the American League, President Clark Griffith was jubilant over the trade.

"I wasn't taking Cronin's word about Kozar," grinned Griffith who is Cronin's father-in-law. "Joe Engel, my man in the Southern Association, has been telling me for months that Kozar is the best-looking thing he has scouted in years and not to miss out on him if I could make a deal."

Griff declared that Culberson was an adequate replacement for Spence as Washington's center fielder, though not a player of Spence's talent. "He hit only .237 last year but he's had a couple of fine seasons with the Red Sox. He's fast in the outfield and on the bases, and he's a right-handed hitter."

Culberson In Center

The Nats now envision their outfield as Buddy Lewis in right, Culberson in center, and Rookie Gil Coan in left. "Kozar and Culberson give us the right-handed hitting we've been needing," said Griffith.

Following announcement of the deal with Boston at noon, Griffith checked out of the major league meetings one day ahead of their close, returning to Washington. His departure presages no more deals by the Nats.

In making the trade with the Red Sox, Griffith left Owner Bill Veeck of the Cleveland Indians a vastly disappointed figure. Veeck, who has been trying for three years to acquire Spence, last night proposed a new trade to the Nats.

Originally, Veeck had offered Washington Catcher Jim Hegan and Pitcher Bob Kuzava for Spence and Pitcher Mickey Haefner. When

It was the fourth straight for the Colonials who are unbeaten.

The Cavaliers, making their first appearance against collegiate opposition, looked rusty and were outplayed from start to finish. During the first half, G. W. was ahead by as moch as 10 points, and the closest Virginia came was early in the selond half when the Colonial lead was reduced to four points.

High scoring honors went to Virginia's Joe Noertker, 6-foot 2-inch sophomore center, who tallied 13 points. Bill Pandach, also of Virginia, tied Small with 11.

Almost 2 Million Saw AAC Games

New York, Dec. 10 (U.P.).—The All-America Football Conference announced today that a total of 1,828,480 fans watched the eight league clubs play their 56-game 1947 regular season schedule, an increase of 32.8 per cent over 1946.

Of the regular season total, approximately 1,630,000 were paid admissions, the remainder representing complimentary admissions for wounded veterans, youth groups and others.

The A. A. C. set a new single game attendance record for a regular season contest when 82,576 saw the Los Angeles Dons play the Yankees, and attracted a record gate of $168,001.39 for the clash between the Browns and Yankees at Cleveland.

Irish Awarded 'M' Club Trophy

Minneapolis, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Dr. Henry L. Williams Trophy, awarded by the University of Minnesota "M" Club annually to the team topping the final Associated Press football poll, today was headed for Notre Dame, which won permanent possession by topping the voting for the third year.

The Irish won two legs on the trophy in 1943 and 1946 by being voted top choice of the Nation's sports writers.

Deacons' Ognovich Voted League's Best

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 10 (AP).—Nick Ognovich, brilliant blocking back at Wake Forest College, today was selected as the outstanding football player in the Southern Conference area by the Norfolk Sports Club, which polled more than 60 sports writers and coaches.

Armed's 2d Try

116 Named For $100,000 Santa Anita

Arcadia, Calif., Dec. 10 (AP).—Headed by the Calumet Farm's champion, Armed, making his second try for the fat purse, 116 candidates have been nominated for the 11th running of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, February 28.

The slate, released by the Los Angeles Turg Club today, includes an imposing array of winners of 94 stakes this past season and list such campaigners as Cosmic Bomb, Briday Flower, Fervent, Cover Up, Double Jay, On Trust, With Pleasure and Miss Kimo.

Foreign-bred Threats

Also named are 26 foreign-bred threats. They are led by the big grey horse from Chile, Olhaverry, who won the handicap last March and left the favored Armed to finish fifth in a bulky field of 22 starters.

Carrying on the international theme, the nominations list the Australian champion, Shannon, whose entry was accepted subject to formal registration by the Jockey Club; Endeavour II, a stakes winner from Argentina, along with Rico Monte, Talon and Miss Grillo, and a delegation of Irish importations headed by Sullivan, Fast and Fair and Radiotherapy.

Busher Makes Comeback

Virtually all of the candidates, with the exception of Armed, recently voted the leading horse of the year, Fervent, Bridal Flower and Knockdown, are already in training for Santa Anita's opening, December 27.

Charles S. Howard of San Francisco, who won the race with Seabiscuit and Kayak II, led with eight nominations, while the King Ranch of Texas had five, including Bridal Flower.

Warriors Sign Rocker

Philadelphia, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Philadelphia Warriors, defending champions of the Basketball Association of America, today announced signing of Jack Rocker, 6-foot-5 University of California standout.

Once Again: Baugh Sets More Records

Sammy Baugh pasted another sheet in his individual records scrapbook yesterday when National Football League statisticians credited him with a new all-time high in pass attempts.

Sam's 313 attempts erase the old mark of 295 set by the Cardinals' William Schwenk in 1942. The 313 tosses yielded 185 completions and 2595 yards, league-leading marks for both departments.

Sid Luckman, the Bears' "T" general, also surpassed the old mark with 299 attempts. Luckman has completed 166 for 2505 yards.

Van Buren After Record

Philadelphia's Steve Van Buren was held to a mere 44 yards by the Cards but pushed his ground-gaining performance to 912 yards. He needs 92 in next Sunday's game with the Green Bay Packers to match the league record of 1004 set by the Bears' Beattie Feathers.

Kenny Washington of Los Angeles dropped down to fifth place as Tonay Canado of Green Bay and Camp Wilson of Detroit moved in behind Van Buren and Johnny Clement of Pittsburgh in yards gaining rushing. But the Rams' fleet Negro still had the best average of 7.3 yards per carry. Charley Trippi of the Cards was second with 5.3, one-tenth of a yard more than Clement has averaged.

Bear Jim Keane remained the best of the pass receivers, having gained 749 yards in 57 aerials, eight of which went for touchdowns.

Harder Still Leads Scorers

Pat Harder, of the Cards, who scored twice against the Eagles, boosted his total points to 96 to stay in front as the circuit's No. 1 scorer. Ken Kavanaugh, Bears' veteran end, was in the second place with 72.

Luckman established one record of which he probably is not proud. He has had 28 of his aerials intercepted.

Other leader are: pass interceptions, Frank Seno, Boston, 10; punters, Jack Jacobs, Green Bay, 44.6-yard average; punt returns, Walter Slater, 28 for 435 yards and kickoff returns, Eddie Saenz, Washington, 27 for 746 yards.

At Miami Today

Worsham And Snead Are Favored

Miami, Fla., Dec. 10 (AP).—The twenty-fourth annual $10,000 Miami Open Golf Tournament gets under way shortly after daybreak tomorrow with defending champ Sammy Snead, National Open Champion Lew Worsham and Jimmy Demaret, the year's leading money winner favored in the bulky cast of 228 players.

For the first time in six years, Bantam Ben Hogan was not among the pretourney choices because of an ailing back.

The tournament will be played over the 6310-yard par-70 Miami Springs Course.

Snead, who plans to play in only four tournaments a year after the winter tour in order to devote his time to a new job at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., would not predict the outcome.

"If the tournament were over a tough course," he said, "the cream would separate itself from the milk. But at the Springs there are plenty of golfers who can hit the greens in a couple of blows.

"That makes the man with the hot putter the one to beat."

Snead and Henry Picard, who is absent, hold the tourney record of 267 for the course. Snead sees the possibility of it being broken because of the fast condition of the greens.

Leslie O'Connor Again Elected to Executive Council

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—Leslie M. O'Connor, general manager of the Chicago White Sox, was re-elected as American League member of the major league eexecutive council today for one year.

O'Connor served in that capacity during the past year, although Ben Fiery, secretary of the Cleveland Indians, substituted for him in one meeting at Cincinnati while O'Connor was involved with Commissioner A. B. Chandler in the controversy over the signing of a high school player, George Zoerterman.

At its meeting here today, the American League also discussed the Pacific Coast bid for major league status and was to make a decision this afternoon. However, an announcement was not expected until tomorrow's joint meeting with the National loop.

PCL to Hear Major League Answer Today

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—The National League discussed two Pacific Coast proposals for major league recognition today and withheld announcement of its decision until the joint meeting with the American League under Commissioner A. B. Chandler tomorrow morning.

Ford Frick, president of the National League, said the coast's bid for outright recognition as a big league was considered and also its resolution asking for conditional major league status but still as a part of the National Association of Minor Leagues.

Although there was no official confirmation, it was reported that both proposals were rejected.

In answer to a question, Frick said "we have made no specific proposal to take in four Pacific Coast League teams." However, Frick said the matter was discussed.

A television committee was set up including, Phil Wrigley of Chicago, John Quinn of Boston, Horace Stoneham of New York and Frick to make a continuing study of the medium.

Five National clubs are televising their games, Philadelphia, Brooklyn, New York, Chicago and St. Louis. Boston expects to be ready by opening day, 1948, and Cincinnati also may televise its games. Only Pittsburgh definitely will not televize its games.

Atlanta, Dec. 10 (AP).—A reliable source said today that Fred Russell, sports editor of the Nashville Banner, will be offered the position of commissioner of the Southeastern Conference when that body meets at Biloxi, Miss., Friday.

Russell, nationally known in sports circles and author of two books, was reported en route to the Mississippi coast to cover the group's annual meeting for his paper and could not be reached for a statement. He is a law graduate of Vanderbilt.

Marshall Plan for Baseball

Think Twice Before Going West, Redskin Boss Warns

By Arthur Edson
Associated Press Sports Writer

The major league baseballers, with their talk of expanding to the West Coast, got some advice yesterday from a man who has been taking teams west for years.

And, said George Preston Marshall, president of the Washington football Redskins:

"I don't know how far the baseball people have gone on this, but I do know that every road trip out there will cost them $10,000 in traveling expenses.

"During a baseball season, their traveling costs will be increased well over a half million dollars."

The way Marshall has it figured—and he has it figured on practically everything—when a club like, say, the New York Yankees, goes west, the money will roll in.

But what about the St. Louis Browns?"

The Marshall plan (George Preston) shows that if they didn't draw, their extra expenses might wreck them.

But let's get around to Marshall's business, football.

He said that a recent trip to the West Coast, counting salaries, overhead and traveling expenses, meant a $25,000 loss to the Boston Yanks.

Your reporter brought up another question:

"What about the All-America Conference? Do you, of the National League, ever plan to get together on a playoff?"

"Let's forget all about feuds for a moment," said Marshall. "I read in the papers that the fans are demanding a playoff.

"Well, that demand certainly has not shown up at the box-office.

"Look at this year: Only eight of the 18 pro football teams have managed to break even.

'In order to break even in this business now you've got to gross $100,000 a game. And that kind of money is hard to find."

And the All-America Conference?

"I predicted when it started last year it would last only three years. The prediction still stands."

Probers Boosted For Scholarships

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).— District Attorney Frank S. Hogan suggested today that athletic scholarships be established for "deserving grand jurors."

Hogan noted that during the past year "more and more of the grand jury's time has been given to the investigation of sports contests."

These, he said, were "not the ordinary games of chance but games of skill: basketball, football, boxing."

"All of this would suggest that for efficiency and comprehension the panel grand jury should include some sports authorities," he said.

NFL to Operate 'Hall of Fame'

Philadelphia, Dec. 10 (AP).—The National Football League or its designate will control and operate professional football's Hall of Fame at Latrobe, Pa.

The decision was announced today after a meeting between Commissioner Bert Bell and a committee from the Latrobe memorial organization. A meeting with NFL clubowners in New York next month will consider plans for raising funds for the memorial.

Stribling Hard On Sparmates. Doubles Squad

Stepping up his training pace, Ken Stribling, local colored middleweight, yesterday doubled his sparmates in preparations for Monday night's 10-round feature with Frank Lacey, Baltimore, at Turner's Arena.

Four opponents were fed to the lanky former G.I., and all were given a good battering, Manager Billy Banks reported.

Matchmaker Gabe Menendez announced that the Lacey-Stribling match would be the final for the 1947 indoor season, and that the winner would be pitted against Frank Sweeney, the Southeast slugger, who scored an impressive victory over Bee Bee Washington.

N. Y. Jury Extends Probe of Boxing

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—The New York County grand jury which has been investigating boxing in New York city was extended until January 30 today by general sessions Judge Francis L. Valente at the request of assistant district attorney Alfred J. Scotti and jury foreman Joseph Baumann.

The grand jury has been making an inquiry into the boxing match between Jake LoMotta of New York and Billy Fox of Philadelphia at Madison Square Garden, November 14, in which Fox was awarded a technical knockout in the fourth round.

Science Comes A-Cropper

Hypnotism Is No Boon to Boon; Classic Left More Effective

LONDON, Dec. 10 (AP).—Hypnotism is all very well but it won't ever replace the old-fashioned stright left, according to the experience of Boxer Eric Boon.

He found that out last night when he was outpointed over 15 rounds by Champion Ernie Roderick in their bout for the British welterweight title.

Maybe the story has just a dash of prefight ballyhoo about it, but here's how it goes:

Boon's handlers decided that he had an "inferiority complex." How to overcome it? Simple. Hypnotism.

For some days before the championship encounter, Boon took treatments from a London hypnotist who placed the fighter in a trance and told him over and over again: "You will win."

CAME FIGHT night and the Boon subconscious mind should have been fully convinced it couldn't lose. But in the other corner was veteran Roderick who maybe hadn't bothered to read the newspapers because he proceeded to give Boon a free-of-charge boxing lesson that left the younger man convinced the hypnotist must have been wrong.

Ringside experts agreed that it was a classic straight left that won the fight. Whether Boon will undergo hypnotic treatment to ward off allergy to such a weapon has not yet been decided.

Hertzburg was released by the Knicks early this season after leading the team in scoring last year with 515 points. A former standout at City College of New York, Hertzburg is 6 feet tall and weighs 180. He is 26 years old.

Coach Red Auerbach is hoping that Hertzburg will provide the spark the Caps have needed. Washington has won only four games in 10 starts and trails the Western Division of the Basketball Association of America.

The Bullets, leading the divison, lost their opener to the Caps. The Bullets will be reinforced by a newcomer of their own, 6-foot-3-inch John Abramovic, former Salem, W. Va., College star, who signed last night. He will replace the injured Paul Hoffman.

Loyola Risks 8 Game Streak Against Hoyas Tonight

Chicagoans' Center Has 130-Pt. Total

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Unbeaten Loyola of Chicago takes an eight-game winning streak into its basketball game with Georgetown tonight at the National Guard Armory beginning at 8:45.

After looking at Loyola's schedule, it seems safe to say each team has won one. The visitors from Chicago did score an impressive 61-43 victory over St. John's of Brooklyn Tuesday night in Madison Square Garden. Before that, though, they ran through seven rather obscure schools.

Hoyas at Height Disadvantage

The victims include George Williams College, Aurora, Ripon, Wheaton, St. Norbert, Milwaukee Teachers and Chicago Teachers.

Georgetown can't overlook that performance against St. John's and the classy but comparatively small Hoya squad will be at a height disadvantage tonight.

Loyola's big gun is Center Jack Kerris, who made 18 points in the Garden to bring his eight-game total to 130. Kerris, listed on the program as 6:06 and said to be 6:08, was named player of the year by the Chicago Basketball Writers last season. He also was called the most valuable player in the Chicago Stadium round-robin tournament which was won by Loyola.

Kerris Weak at Foul Line

If the highly regarded Kerris has a weakness it's at the foul line. Against St. John's he converted only four of 12 tries. And last year, he missed 80 while making 112.

Another scoring threat is Forward Ed Earle, runnerup to Kerris. He's 6:03 and a dead shot. Against St. John's, he dropped seven field goals.

Other tall men expected to see action with the unique all-Chicago all-sophomore squad include Ed Dawson, 6:05; Frank O'Grady, 6:03, and Gerry Nagel, 6:01.

Loyola is coached by Thomas J. Haggerty, who turned out some top teams at DePaul University in the late 1930s. In his two previous years at Loyola, the team won 43 and lost 13.

Georgetown wasn't too impressive in its opener but did look good in spots. And the team finally clicked in the overtime session. As usual Capt. Andy Kostecka led the scoring with 17 points. Ray Corley wasn't far behind with 14, and Center Ken Brown came through with 10.

In addition to this trio, others expected to see a lot of action tonight include Playmaker Danny Kraus, who also notched 10 points, Tommy O'Keefe, Ed Brembs, Joe Culhane and Johnnie Brown.

Area Schedule

Loyola of Chicago vs. Georgetown at National Guard Armory, 8:45 p. m.

Mount St. Mary's at American University, 8:30 p. m.

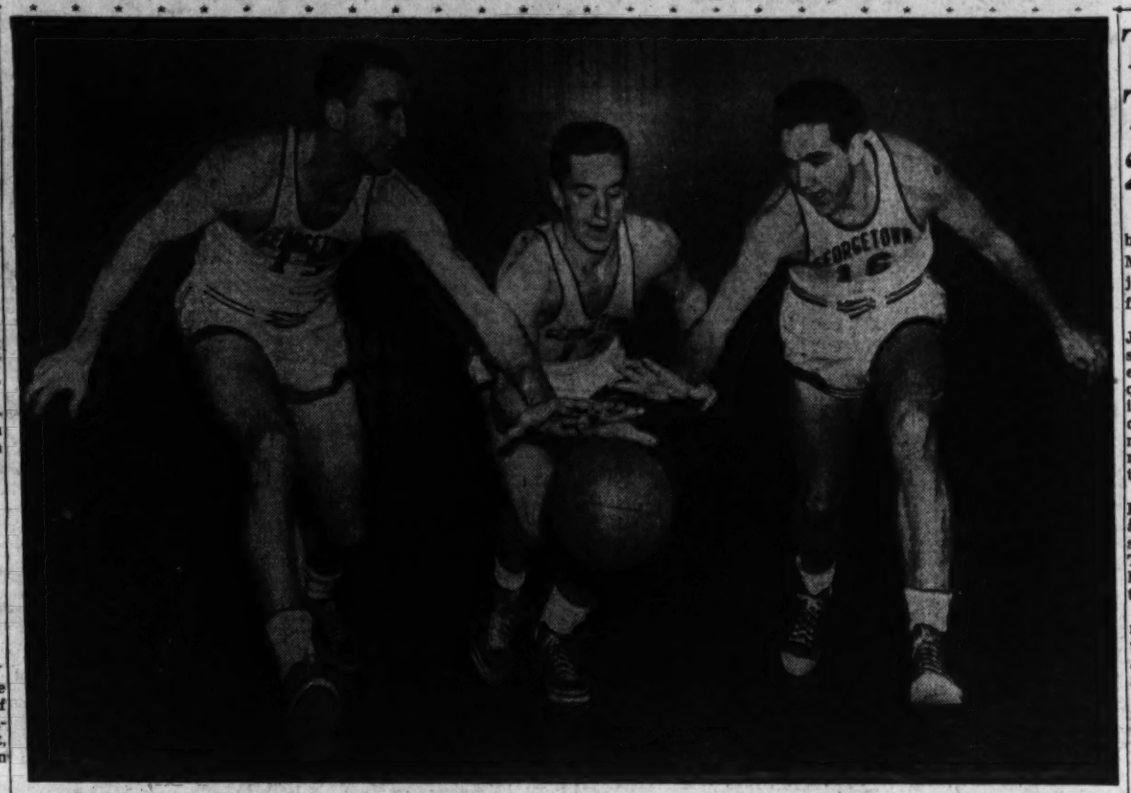
American Plays Tonight

Two strong contenders for the Mason-Dixon Conference basketball title meet here tonight with Mount St. Mary's at American University.

Mount St. Mary's of Emmitsburg, Md., has a good chance to be the surprise of the conference. Coach Steve Filiopwicz has a veteran team that Villanova barely beat, 55-53, in an earlier test this season. The visitors are led by Pete Clark, scoring ace, and Mike Russo, who formerly played for West Virginia.

American, although beaten by CCNY and Connecticut, still is favored to win the Mason-Dixon championship. Reggie Crockett, with 62 points, is pacing the local club in scoring, but Freshman Leroy Ishman is only a point behind.



By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

Terps Open Tonight With 2 Stars Out

Maryland, which opens its basketball season tonight at Western Maryland, received a preseason jolt yesterday when two promising freshmen were ruled ineligible.

The frosh, Spencer Wright and Jack Meyers, are both transfer students. Under Southern Conference rules, a year's residence is required before athletic competition is permitted. Wright won't become eligible until February 1, missing 13 of the 24 games. Meyers, ruled out until next June, will miss the entire season.

Wright came to Maryland from Bloomsburg (Pa.) Teachers. Meyers, at 6:05, the tallest man on the squad, attended Moorehead (Ky.) Teachers for two months although he didn't participate in athletics there.

Coach A. L. (Flucie) Stewart, naturally, wasn't too happy about the situation. Former coach at Appalachian, N. C., Teachers, this is his first year at Maryland.

"I was counting on both boys for varsity service," he said yesterday. "With them, goes most of our height. I guess now we'll have what I'd call a 'late' team. I expected the boys to be better the second half of the schedule."

Two veterans are expected to carry most of the load. They are Bill Brown and John Edwards. Helping them out will be Ed Waller, Bob Keene and Al Lann, who all had some varsity experience last season.

Quantico Averages 37.9 Pts.; Bidding for National Fame

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

THE QUANTICO, Va., Marines football team overlooked by the college and pro-conscious fans, bids for national recognition December 20, when it journeys to San Diego, Calif., to play for the All-Navy championship.

Quantico's opponent in the big game will be decided Saturday when the Alameda, Calif., Naval Air Station plays the Pacific Fleet Destroyers at San Diego for the West Coast Navy title.

Quantico won the Eastern championship last Saturday by whipping Jacksonville, Fla., Training Command, 35-12, before 10,000 spectators in the Jacksonville 'Gator Bowl.

On their way to the Eastern title, the Marines compiled an imposing record, winning their last 11 games after losing their opener to Washington and Lee University, 13-0.

SINCE THE W. & L. game, Quantico has rolled up 417 points to 50 for the opposition, or an average score per game of 37.9 to 4.6. The Marines have averaged the big league total of 355 yards gained per game.

Coached by Lieut. Col. Marvin (Moose) Stewart, star end at Louisiana State University in 1935 and '36, the Quantico team boasts several former collegiate stars. Heading the list are Halfback Joe Bartos and Tackle Joe Donahue of the Naval Academy, Tackle Clement Thomas of Tennessee and Fullback Glenn (Doc) Barrington of the University of Florida.

The 6-foot, 2-inch, 200-pound Bartos has been the leading ground gainer and pointmaker of the team. He has picked up 692 yards in 86 assignments for an average of eight yards per try. He has scored 15 touchdowns.

EIGHTEEN year old Don Clement, 170-pound 6 footer, who never played college ball in his native Chicago, has been Bartos' chief assistant with nine touchdowns. Clement caught the fancy of Vanderbilt scouts who were at last Saturday's game in Jacksonville, and they are trying to nab him their school when Don's enlistment runs out this spring.

One of Quantico's big boosters is Ed Solomon, McKinley Tech High football coach, who has officiated several of the Marines' home games.

"They are equal to a good college team," says Solomon. "They were taught the Redskins' version of the T-formation by Wilbur Moore and Andy Farkas, former 'Skin stars, and have added their own deception to such an extent that after working a couple of the Quantico games, I still don't know all their plays. I even found myself getting run over by the ball-carrier."

Babe Ruth Plays Santa Claus for Kid Polio Victims

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—A man in a red suit and long white whiskers played Santa Claus for 50 crippled children at a Christmas Party in the Hotel Astor here today and began autographing baseballs.

"I want to take this opportunity to wish all young children, not only in America but all over the world, a Merry Christmas," he said.

Metro League Meets Tonight

Two important problems to be discussed at the board of directors meeting of the Metropolitan Football League at the Touchdown Club tonight are the securing of suitable playing fields for league games and insurance to cover injuries to players participating in these games.

At last week's general meeting of the league the membership re-elected Andy Farkas as president, and Ray Henderson as secretary-treasurer and elected Stephen J. Lukacs to replace Les Daly as vice president.

League elevens are made up of about 600 young men of college age who participate regularly in strictly amateur grid contests.

Arkansas, Aggies At Garden Tonight

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—Arkansas and Oklahoma A. and M. invade Madison Square Garden tonight to meet two of New York's unbeaten quintets in a college basketball doubleheader.

The Raborbacks, runners-up in the Southwest Conference the past three years, take on New York University in the opener at 8 p. m. (EST) while the Aggies, NCAA champions in 1945 and 1946, tangle with Long Island University in the second game.

It will be the sixth Garden appearance for Arkansas, which has lost its last three meetings with NYU, and the 19th game on the Garden court for the Aggies.

Nats Acquire Rookie Star, Culberson in Spence Deal

that proposal was scoffed at by Griffith, Veeck countered with a proposition to give Washington five players, including Third Baseman Ken Keltner, for Pitchers Early Wynn and Spence.

The Red Sox, already bolstered by the deals they made with the Browns, are now assuming even more dominating strength by their acquisition of Spence, though it entailed a bit of pride-swallowing.

Back in 1941, the Red Sox dealt Spence off to Washington like the thirteenth bun in a baker's dozen in a four-player deal. He was dismissed lightly in the trade that gave Pitcher Ken Chase and Outfielder Johnny Welaj to Boston in a swap for Pitcher Jack Wilson and Spence.

With the Nats, Spence was regarded as one of the top outfielders of the league, with a batting average that ran as high as .323 in 1942, the first year he was away from Boston. He missed the 1945 season while in the Navy and his absence was promptly reflected when the Nats finished last that year.

In Spence, the Red Sox gained an extra-base hitter who can patrol any outfield job with the best and whose throwing arm measures as one of the finest. But Spence's duties with the Red Sox are uncertain at this time.

It is believed that Spence may be alternated with Sam Mele in right field against different types of pitching, but the Red Sox are also indicating that he may be used at first base. He played first with the Nats on rare occasions and showed deftness at the job. The Red Sox are dissatisfied with the play of Muraell Jones, their first baseman most of last season.

This newest deal of the Red Sox is expected to spur the Yinkees to trading action of some kind, with the Boston club now posing an ominous threat to the Yankees' pennant.

New York's once-proposed deal with the Nats for pitcher Early Wynn supposedly has cooled, but with the Red Sox threatening to steal the show the Yankees may renew their efforts to get Wynn both to bolster their pitching staff and impress New York fans with the sincerity of their efforts to stay on top.

With their second base problem solved—they hope—the Nats now may be more disposed to trade Wynn off for the outfielding talent the Yankees have offered, plus a catcher.

Voyles, Auburn Call it 'Quits'

Auburn, Ala., Dec. 10 (AP).—Acting President Ralph B. Draughon of Alabama Polytechnic Institute announced today the contract of football Coach Carl Voyles has been terminated by mutual agreement.

No successor was announced.

In a formal statement Draughon said "the decision was reached with great reluctance" and added that he felt Voyles "has been the victim of circumstances beyond his control."

Voyles came to Auburn in 1944 from William and Mary where his 1942 team won the Southern Conference championship. In his four seasons at Auburn, the Tigers have won only four Southeastern Conference games, three of them from Florida.

Auburn yesterday received a State ruling that the school could legally buy the remainder of Voyles' contract, which has two years to run. There was no announcement of terms in the terminating agreement.

Lujack, 'Wedey' East-West Foes

San Francisco, Dec. 10 (AP).—Two colorful backfield aces—Johnny Lujack of Notre Dame and Herman Wedemeyer of St. Mary's—will face each other New Year's Day in the annual Shrine East-West football game.

The game's promoters announced today that Wedemeyer had accepted an invitation to play on the West team. Lujack, All-America back, accepted a bid to the East squad after the Notre Dame-Southern Cal game last Saturday.

It will be Wedemeyer's second East-West game appearance. The fleet-footed Gael star played in 1944, when his sensational performance prevented a heavily-favored East team from getting more than a 13-13 tie.

New Commodore

St. Michael's Md., Dec. 10 (AP). Roger R. Ringgold has been elected commodore of the Miles River Yacht Club to succeed William C. Fink.

Bucs Buy Riddle From Cincinnati

New York, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates today announced the purchase of Pitcher Elmer Riddle from the Cincinnati Reds for the waiver price of $10,000.

The 33-year-old righthander, who tried a comeback with the Reds last season after being sidelined for two years by a sore arm, won one and lost none in 14 games, all in relief.

In 1941, his first full season in the majors, Riddle led all National League pitchers. He won 19 and lost 4 and had an earned-run average of 2.24.

Lawless Miss Beats Out Annie's Dream, Boston Man in Stretch

Cardoza Saddles 3 Winners

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 10.—Three horses, each considered a champion here at one time or another, clashed today.

G. Y. Booker's Lawless Miss proved the best at the weights and under the conditions, winning by a length and a half.

In a photo for second money, H. N. Warren's Annie's Dream took the position by a head margin over Mrs. J. D. S. Coleman's Boston Man.

Fast Time on Dull Track

She returned a $5.60 mutuel in registering her second victory in a row here. The daughter of Gallahadion, the Milky Way Stable's surprise winner of the Kentucky Derby, was clocked in 1:15 3/5, excellent time considering the track was a bit on the dull side.

Lawless Miss and Annie's Dream carried like weights of 121 pounds to 124 for Boston Man. Four others competed in the sprint.

Belle Moose gave Annie's Dream a struggle in the early running while Jockey E. Carrillo rated Lawless Miss within striking distance and Boston Man was far back as expected at this stage.

On the backstretch, Annie's Dream shook off Belle Moose but she still had a task on her hands for Lawless Miss moved up on the outside and went head and head with the Warren mare.

Cardoza Boots In Three

The two battled it out from there to a few jumps from the wire where Lawless Miss responded to pressure and drew slightly out. Boston Man, in the meanwhile, had rallied and was charging through the stretch like an express train, just failing to get up for the place.

Had the race been another 10 yards, Boston Man would have been the winner.

The day's riding honors went to Jockey George Cardoza, leading saddle artist of the meeting. He won three races. After Jockey Wayne Weber booted Mrs. L. E. Torreyson's Gradea home in the first race at $9, Cardoza put the finishing touches on a $23.20 daily double by scoring with Mrs. L. A. Starling's Strolling Don at $4.80.

Cardoza came back to take the fourth with C. F. Hovis' Swami at $6.40 and then annexed the fifth with O. D. Shank, Jr.'s Belstan, a $6 shot.

At Charles Town.

DEAR FOLKS:

Benny Richmond, an exercise boy, was injured about the head this morning during training hours in a spill. Apprentice Bobby Shirey, who rode with success here last spring reported and will swing into action this week. Jockeys have been set down here for a number of reasons, but Stanley Austin got it for shutting off the last horse in a race, an innovation. Horsemen want the Maryland half-mile dates revised for next year so that Cumberland will follow Charles Town instead of Bel Air. By making the line-up according to the geographic locations of the tracks, horsemen would save much money in transportation fees. Jockey George Cardoza has been averaging better than a winner a day. Bowes Bond, who used to operate here has gone into the big-time training ranks. He was a visitor today. By the way, 208 trainers' licenses have been issued here. Jack Carpenter, Racing Form writer, was a visitor from Baltimore. See you on the rail—BILL.

Philadelphia, Dec. 10 (AP).—The 1948 Army-Navy football game will be played in Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium on Saturday, November 27.

Farm Agents Asked to Back Aid to Europe

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—Nearly 100 agricultural extension service agents and soil conservationists were urged today to back economic aid to needy countries and to help carry out a long-range program for farm prosperity.

County agents and extension specialists joined home demonstration agents and United States Soil Conservation Service workers at the beginning of a three-day session in Carvel Hall.

Dr. T. B. Symons, State extension director and dean of the Maryland College of Agriculture at College Park, sounded the call for aid to war-struck countries.

"The eyes of the world are upon us as we bring home to our people the hunger and dire needs of millins who were made homeless by the ravages of war, and whom we must assist, if for only the selfish reason of protecting as far as possible our own civilization and standards of living," Dr. Symons declared.

He encouraged extension agents to "emphasize the need for saving grain and other foods."

Fred Bailey, of Washington, National Grange public relations officer, said fundamentals of a sound farm program are: Abundant production against "price penalties on that abundance," price stability and modernization of parity.

Dr. A. L. Patrick of Upper Darby, Pa., soil conservator for the Northeastern region, told the conference more than 6000 Maryland farms, covering 900,000 acres, are operating under conservation plans.

Distiller Pages County's Kettle

Winchester, Va., Dec. 10 (Spl.). The Frederick County Board of Supervisors is in receipt of this letter:

"Chairman of the Poor Farm. Dear Sir—Do you know who bought the copper kettle at the sale? (The county farm was recently sold by the supervisors.) I need one. I expect to put a distillery at Harpers Ferry. I make the best whisky in the world. I am the only one in the world that can take the headache out of whisky."

Most Peanut Farmers Favor Acreage Limit, Market Quotas

By the United Press

The Nation's peanut farmers have in effect voted themselves a guaranteed minimum price next year, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday.

The department said peanut growers in 15 States had overwhelmingly approved acceptance of the Government's acreage restrictions and marketing quotas on their next three crops.

But Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson said last week the quotas and restrictions probably will be suspended in view of the world food shortages and increased peanut prices.

In such a case, the referendum would have only one major effect on the 1948 crop: It would permit the Government to continue to support edible peanut prices at 90 per cent of parity.

As one Agriculture official put it, the farmers had "everything to gain and nothing to lose" in voting for the restrictions. The department said returns from nine of the 15 peanut-growing States showed about 88 per cent of the farmers voted to accept the restrictions.

Rent Proposal Offered

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—A proposed rent control ordinance for Cumberland was submitted to Mayor Thomas S. Post today by the Western Maryland Labor Unity Conference. The labor group suggested that a commission of three be named to establish maximum rentals after the expiration of Federal controls in February.

Slot Machine Move Speeded In St. Marys

Leonardtown, Md., Dec. 10 (Spl.). Authorized to legalize slot machines by Tuesday's referendum, the St. Marys County Commissioners will meet at 10 a. m. Friday to officially set the machines in motion.

A. F. King, clerk to the commissioners, said the meeting could not be called earlier because the "official returns gave the slot machine advocates a 2245-to-1254 majority.

A regular meeting of the commission is not scheduled until next Tuesday, and Friday's session was called for the specific purpose of taking immediate action on the slot machine proposal.

Under the special bill authorizing the referendum, the commissioners must specify by resolution the type of coin-operated machines they desire to legalize, and set a schedule of license fees. The commissioners already have approved a 5 per cent gross receipts tax, to be deducted from the "take" of each machine.

Basing their estimates on a $50 maximum license permitted by law, officials have calculated the machines will net the county about $100,000 a year.

The result of the balloting brought no criticism from opponents of slot machines, who accepted their defeat philosophically on the ground that the referendum was the "democratic answer" to the gambling dispute.

Maryland P-TA Fails To Oppose Training

Baltimore, Dec. 10 (AP).—The Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers declined at its annual convention to oppose universal military training, as recommended by the National Organization.

Mrs. Stanley G. Cook of Indian Head, Md., national legislative chairman and a representative to the national congress, said today only about half the State P-TA groups had adopted the policy fostered by national headquarters.

It now appears the national body may not be able to oppose the training program when it comes up before Congress.

Mrs. Cook said approval of 30 State P-TA organizations was necessary before national officials could fight the measure.

Two Officers Tell Of Fatal Jail Fight

Auto Dealer Struck in Self-Defense They Say; Deny He Was 'Worked Over'

Elkton, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—Two police officers charged with manslaughter took the stand today to deny they had "worked over" a Salisbury, Md., automobile dealer and truck line operator in a fight at the jail after he had been arrested for drunken driving.

Maryland State Trooper John Joseph Harbaugh said he aimed a knockout punch at the chin of Milton H. Jones in a "life and death" struggle aboard the elevator taking them to the lockup atop the Wicomico County courthouse at Salisbury last July 26.

Jack W. Turner, 63-year-old, one-armed night turnkey who operated the lift, said he struck Jones twice when the 31-year-old businessman attacked him in the corridor of the jail a few moments later.

Jones was pronounced dead later at Peninsula General Hospital in Salisbury. Two staff physicians concluded the State's case earlier today with testimony that he died of a massive brain hemorrhage "probably caused" by blows on the head.

Drs. Kendrick McCullough, pathologist, and Charles Fischer, chief surgeon, said it was unlikely a hemorrhage of the type could be caused by acute alcoholism and excitement generated in a fight.

The defense produced a medical witness who directly contradicted the Salisbury physicians.

Dr. George D. Merrill, instructor in pathology and neurology at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, said there could be no such hemorrhage without deep lacerations, fracture of the skull and profound disturbances of the anatomy of the head.

Injuries shown on the report Dr. McCullough made on his autopsy would not be sufficient to produce the hemorrhage, he said.

Harbough, on the State police force since 1944 and the 29-year-old father of five children, gave his account of what happened after he reached the jail with Jones after making the arrest on the outskirts of Salisbury and was taking him up in the elevator with Turner and State Trooper M. S. Clevenger.

Hotel Manager Cleared in Death

Roanoke, Va., Dec. 10 (AP).—A murder charge against a hotel manager who did as he was told when a desk clerk tossed him a pistol and said, "Now, you're armed. Start shooting," was dismissed in police court today.

Police Justice Richard F. Pence termed the fatal shooting of John Lee Garlick a "clear and solid case of self-defense" and dismissed the charge against James Paul Martin, manager of the Cavalier Hotel here.

Witnesses told today of a series of disturbances caused by the 35-year-old clerk on the afternoon of November 29. With a loaded pistol turned on him, the hotel manager pleaded with Garlick not to shoot. It was then that Garlick pitched Martin a second pistol and told him to "start shooting."

Guilty Plea Refused In Waitress' Death

Baltimore, Dec. 10 (AP).—The court refused to accept Charles F. Masek's plea of guilty to a manslaughter charge as the slender, pale 17-year-old high school student went on trial today for the slaying of a New York waitress after a drinking party last summer.

Judge Joseph Sherbow changed the plea to innocent after one of Masek's attorneys expressed a doubt that his client wielded a brickbat August 17 on Mrs. Mina Taylor, 32, who had come here from New York to visit her sister. The judge ordered a formal trial.

U. S. Accused Of Ignoring Rent Controls

By The Associated Press

Senator John J. Williams (R., Del.) said yesterday the Federal Government was violating the rent control law at housing projects near naval bases, charging rentals as much as 300 per cent above those in effect two years ago.

He told his colleagues he had asked that the Senate Armed Services Committee investigate what he called "unjustified discrimination" and correct any injustices retroactive to September 1.

Williams said he had made a thoroguh examination of the rents at the Homoja housing unit at Annapolis, Md., a Quonset hut development, and found they were three times above November 1, 1943, figures. Williams said that private landlords with property in Annapnolis were forbidden to increase their rents.

He added: "It is just inconceivable that we should find a Government agency itself increasing their rents as much as 300 perecent and doing that by taking advantage of men in uniform."

The Annapolis units, he said, were rented for $30 a month until November, 1946, when they were boosted 25 per cent.

Delmarva Cooperates In Conserving Grain

Salisbury, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—Cooperation by the world's largest poultry growing section in a pledge to conserve grain is reflected in a report of November operations by the Delmarva Broiler Federation.

Total chickens set during November in the Delmarva hatcheries was 4,280,583, as compared with 5,390,520 the previous month. The trend on chicks hatched was the same, 3,219,112 in November and 5,224,840 in October.

Viers Mill Housing Strike Is Settled

Dispute Resulted Over Hiring of Non-Union Labor

Differences over hiring nonunion labor, resulting in a three-day strike at Viers Mill Village, the low-cost housing project in Montgomery County, were reported setteled late yesterday afternon.

More than 200 carpenters, laborers and engineers, who walked off the 1400 home project which was started about two months ago, were scheduled to return to work this morning.

First to leave the job on Monday were about 25 or 30 members of Hoisting and Portable Engineers Local 77 (AFL). AFL carpenters and laborers walked out in sympathy with the engineers.

A union official said the engineers walked out after Fago Construction Co., of Rochester, N. Y., hired nonunion labor to assist in excavating foundations for the homes.

Details of yesterday's settlement were not made public immediately.

Sex Offender Gets Chance For 'Cure'

The defendant was Hunter Scott Bandy, 32, of 4516 Gladwyn dr., Bethesda, a former $6000-a-year Navy Department aeronautical engineer.

He appeared in Circuit Court on appeal from Silver Spring Police Court where he had been found guilty of two counts of assault and one of indecent exposure and sentenced to a year in the Maryland House of Correction.

In Circuit Court, through his attorney, Barnard T. Welch, Bandy pleaded guilty. Dr. Benjamin Karpman, St. Elizabeths Hospital psychiatrist and authority on abnormal sex behaviour, told the court Bandy could be cured if given proper treatment. Other psychiatrists gave similar testimony.

Dr. Karpman told the court that, if sentenced to jail, the former naval engineer and father of two children would emerge with the same tendencies which caused him to induce two 7-year-old girls into an automobile September 17 for the offenses for which he was charged.

Judge Prescott told Bandy he would suspend the sentence "provided you go to an institution and be confined until a physician reports to me you are cured." The judge then added: "And you should not go back to your neighborhood. You should dispose of your property there and make a clean start."

Bandy told the judge he was "anxious" to receive the psychiatric treatments recommended.

Pollution Parley Friday

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—A revised measure to outlaw creation of new sources of pollution will be considered Friday at a meeting of the Maryland Commission on Water Pollution Control. The meeting will be held at the office of Dr. Robert H. Riley in Baltimore.

War Vessel Fishes Flier From Ocean

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 10 (AP).—William C. Gilley, a civilian flier of Princess Anne, Md., was en route to Norfolk today aboard the USS Mississippi, a naval experimental gunnery ship, which rescued him after his plane crashed in the Atlantic Ocean 24 miles off Hog Island last night.

Gilley was picked up by a small boat from the former battleship shortly after his twin-engined Cessna plane plunged into the water while on a flight from Wingate, N. C., to Salisbury, Md. He suffered a broken nose and facial lacerations.

Gravel Pit Cave-in Fatally Crushes Farmer

Easton, Md., Dec. 10 (AP).—Lester J. Mueller, 29-year-old Cordova farmer, was crushed to death when buried beneath about 20 tons of earth in a cave-in at a gravel pit near here, State police reported today.

An emergency crew of the State Roads Commission worked with hand and power shovels nearly 30 minutes in a futile attempt to reach him alive. Mueller's truck was almost buried also when a side of the pit collapsed.

SCC Approves

Franconia Due to Get Bus Routes

Long-sought bus service between Alexandria and Franconia, in Fairfax County, was approved yesterday by the Virginia State Corporation Commission.

The commission paved the way for inauguration of the new service by giving the Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. authority to use two routes, one as an alternate, which would link the rapidly developing rural community with downtown Alexandria.

The principal route would be from Alexandria to the intersection of Route 1 and Blunt's la.; along Blunt's la. to Telegraph rd., and on Telegraph rd. to Franconia. The alternate route would run from the intersection of Blunt's la. to Telegraph rd. to Duke st. extended, and along Duke st. to downtown Alexandria.

ABW officials said yesterday the starting date of the new service had not been determined, pending further efforts to have the State highway department install a traffic light at Blunt's la. and Route 1.

Unless the light is installed, the company said, it will be impossible to use the Blunt's la. route on return runs from Franconia because an "extremely hazardous" left turn would be required at that point. The alternate route, however, could be used.

During the hearing before the State Corporation Commission, George A. Ford, an official of a development corporation said his company would be willing to furnish and install the light if the highway department approved the plan.

In addition to approving the new bus route, the SCC gave the Alexandria bus company permanent authority to continue service between Alexandria and the Cameron Quartermaster Depot on Duke st. extended. The service was started in 1943 as a "temporary operation."

City Obtains Funds For Airport Building

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 10 (Spl.).—The city government here today had in sight its matching fund of $17,500 for construction of an administration building at the Municipal Airfield, as a result of some business strategy.

Last night it needed $5400 to match the $17,500 in Federal funds offered. The airport advisory committee conferred with the Martinsburg Flying Service, which has a lease for four years still to run, and it agreed to put up the $5400 in return for a credit of $100 monthly for its lease and an extension of the lease for 3½ years. The City Council agreed to the proposal.

Group Backs Ordinance for Regional Plan

Representatives from four Virginia communities, meeting in Alexandria, last night drew up a proposed ordinance for creation of a "Northern Virginia Regional Planning Commission."

The ordinance, which was approved by the 14 representatives from Alexandria, Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William Counties, will now go to the governing bodies of these counties for approval.

The commission would adopt "a comprehensive regional plan for the physical, economic, and social development of the region," which member communities may adopt in whole, in part, or in amended form, the ordinance states. The plan would not be binding upon any community until ratified by that community's governing body.

The commission, according to the ordinance draft, would comprise three members from each of the four communities and from the towns of Falls Church, Fairfax and Herndon, all in Fairfax County. Members would be appointed by the local governing bodies. Of the three members one must be from the governing body and one from a local planning commission.

Participating member bodies will be asked to furnish money for the operation of the commission in amounts proportionate to population.

The ordinance provides that any member community may withdraw from the commission 60 days after written notice to that effect. Money which may have been appropriated to the commission by the withdrawing body will not be returned, however, the draft states.

Fredericksburg Council Names Goolrick Mayor

Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 10 (AP).—The Fredericksburg City Council last night unanimously elected former State Senator C. O'Conor Goolrick as Mayor, to succeed the late Claude T. Parcell, who died in November after two months in office.

Goolrick said he would accept the post with the understanding that he would serve only until September, when the term expires. He also specified that he would remain as city attorney, a post he hs held for 28 years, and would accept no compensation as Mayor.

Holidays at the White House

Trumans Will Entertain Family for Christmas

By Elizabeth Maguire

IT WILL be a memorable Christmas for Marian and David Wallace, age 11 and 13, who will visit at the White House with their uncle and aunt, the President and Mrs. Truman.

On Christmas Eve their uncle will light the Christmas tree on the White House lawn, and on Sunday, the 21st, their aunt will take them to the Children's Christmas Broadcast at the Statler Hotel. Here they will meet international contemporaries and hear Christmas greetings sent 'round the world in every language.

They are coming from Denver, Colo., with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Frederick Wallace, brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Truman. Two other brothers and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gates Wallace and Mrs. George Porterfield Wallace of Independence, will join them, and the President's sister, Miss Mary Truman, is coming on from Grandview, Mo.

This will be the first Christmas the Trumans have spent in the White House. The past two years they have journeyed to Independence, but this year the family will come to them.

The group will be complete with Miss Margaret Truman, who will remain for the holiday festivities following her concert at Constitution Hall on the 22d. On Saturday, the 20th, she has invited members of Mrs. Truman's press conference to an interview in the Oval Room of the White House.

Mrs. Truman's schedule for the next two weeks is scarcely light enough to allow time for late Christmas shopping. Yesterday she was hostess at two teas, one at 4 and one at 5 o'clock, and next Wednesday she will again receive at the same hours. Tuesday evening will be the judicial reception at the White House, and on Sunday, the 21st, at 2:30, Mrs. Truman will attend the annual Christmas bag party at Children's Emergency Home, Central Union Mission, 624 Indiana ave.

Current guests at the White House are Mr. and Mrs. Colman Branton of Kansas City. Mrs. Branton is the former Miss Mary Shaw of Kansas City, at whose wedding Miss Truman was maid of honor last spring.

WITH only 13 days until Christmas, Santa Claus is working overtime. His young visitors are Oscar Ferrari, age 7, and his sister, Patricia Ferrari, who is 9 years old. They are the children of Comdr. Oscar Ferrari, member of the Chilean Naval Mission and the Inter-American Defense Board

Miss Pryse Comes For Weekend Visit

Miss Gwenda Rollins Pryse, daughter of Col. and Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse, will arrive tomorrow from Vassar College to spend the weekend, bringing with her Miss Jean Sheppard, a classmate at Vassar, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman K. Sheppard of Midland, Mich.

The two girls will go to Annapolis on Saturday for the Christmas dance at the Naval Academy and will return to college late Sunday.

Miss Pryse, who made her debut in the spring, will return on December 18 to spend the holidays with her parents and take part in the debutante festivities.

Harvard Club Will Be Feted On Visit Here

Perhaps it's because the Hasty Pudding Club of Harvard has had no show on the road since before the war; or it may be because many local boys are in the cast or on the staff of "Here's the Pitch," 100th production of the club to be presented at Lisner Auditorium the night of Sunday, December 21, that already there is a rush for tickets, a scramble to entertain the Pudding lads.

Miss Carol Bradley, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bradley, has organized a committee of her sister buds, all of whom will enter into the spirit of entertaining the Cambridge visitors.

Those in the group include Miss Beatrice Blair, Miss Allison Bean, Miss Ellen Bacon, Miss Nancy Burdick, Miss Ann Carter, Miss Alice Diggs, Miss Mary de Limur, Miss Elisabeth de Sibour, Miss Juliet Gill, Miss Louise Houghteling, Miss Katherine Hooker, Miss Alberta Legare, Miss Claire Delattre-Seguy, Miss Edith Moffatt, Miss Dudley Nicholson, Miss Ellen Owens, Miss Mary Rapley and Miss Frances Sternhagen.

Already their date books are full. Preceding the show Capt. and Mrs. Dwight Dickenson, jr., are entertaining at a supper party in honor of Miss Bradley and Miss Blair.

Following the show there is to be a gay party given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gay Hooker at their rambling Georgetown house, given in honor of their debutante daughter, Katherine, and their son, Robert Gay Hooker 3d, who will be home from Harvard. The boys are coming and also the committee of debts.

White House Reflections

First Lady Stars—With Star On Her Frock; Red Room Has New Chandelier

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

HIGHLIGHTS of the White House reception for the press: Mrs. Truman looks so handsome in full evening toilette she should wear elaborate dresses more often. Tuesday night the First Lady, for the first time as far as this department knows, wore a decoration. A lavish gold star, it is the Grand Cross of Cuba's Nacional de Merito order and was presented to Mrs. Truman last year . . . David Lawrence, author of a syndicated political column and owner of the magazine World Report, sported the longest string of decorations among the 2000-odd guests.

A newspaperman turned up in a brown tweed suit. Somehow his costume, among the welter of white ties and tails, didn't look out of place. There is a nice flavor of democracy about a guy who either doesn't own evening clothes or had to work late—yet didn't want to miss meeting the President and Mrs. Truman.

A pretty young newspaper woman, dressed and coiffed to the nines—who turned to her husband, saying, "Please take me somewhere to supper and dance! It's so anticlimactic to get all dressed up, shake two hands and then have nowhere to go!"

Has anyone noticed the beautiful crystal chandelier in the Red Room? It is a recent gift of Chester Dale, the red-headed collector of a fabulous art collection. Mr. Dale, who owns so many magnificent paintings that he actually stacks Zuolagas, Manets, Monets and such in his spare bathrooms, usually goes in for modern works of art. But the chandelier, picked up in New England, is eighteenth century . . .

There's a good chance that President Truman may make a trip to Cuba this winter. The President has been invited to be honor guest at one of the "Pro Arte Musical" concerts. The "Pro Arte Musical" is a Havana musical guild, and some of the best music on this hemisphere is heard there.

Discreet Wailing

SPEAKING of official receptions and parties, there is a certain amount of discreet wailing among "old," social Washingtonians. They feel that the feminine members of the President's official family—in other words, wives of Cabinet members—are not doing a good job. It has been customary for each Cabinet lady to give at least one big party a year—to boost Administration prestige, get people together. But some of the wives seldom turn up in Washington, others avoid all social activity, others are just plain relaxed. Pats on the shoulder, orchids and other kudos, however, are thrown Mrs. Fred Vinson's way. The Chief Justice's cheery wife goes everywhere, and probably has poured more cups of tea and coffee than any other woman in Washington during the past few years. Mrs. Truman is doing her very active best—and she could easily use a helping hand or two!

Empress to Be Speaker

IT IS not often that a former Empress goes in for public speaking, but the reticent Zita, former Empress of Austria-Hungary, will address the Women's Democratic Club after luncheon on December 15. The former Empress came to this country from Belgium after her chateau was bombed by German planes at the war's beginning. For some months she and the younger of her eight children stayed at Royalston, Mass., in a house loaned them by the late New York banker, Calvin Bullock. Later she went to Canada, settled in a house not far from Ottawa.

Since then, strictly incognito, she has visited New York and Washington occasionally. Three weeks ago she talked at a forum in Georgetown University.

At Monday's meeting she will discuss Austria's food situation; the former Empress' information, we believe, is largely derived from a tremendous correspondence she carries on with friends and former subjects in Austria. Dark, slim, when the Empress first arrived in this country she wore clothes modeled precisely after those she had worn in 1922, the year her husband, former Emperor Carl, died in exile on the Island of Madeira. Her dresses were long, her collars boned; she was extremely conspicuous, but today her get-up would appear to be a rather exaggerated version of the "new look." Intensely religious, serious-minded, never giving up hope that her children will one day be restored to their royal position, Empress Zita has had them educated with a thoroughness few other individuals have ever been subjected to. All eight of them, four girls and four boys, are handsome—yet none of them has married and the youngest, a girl, is almost 26 years old. No matter what the former Empress has to say about present-day Austrian conditions, it should be intensely interesting to see and hear her speak. Incidentally, the Empress was persuaded to return to Washington by Mrs. Norman Littell.

Your Questions on Homemaking

How can I remove hot chocolate from taffeta. It is the iridescent type of taffeta and the spot is very large. L. B.

Sponge with carbon tetrachloride to dissolve the grease. Dry thoroughly, then sponge with warm water and dust with pepsin powder (purchasable in drug stores. Work the powder into the cloth, let stand for 30 minutes or longer, then sponge with water.

Would you have any ideas for cleaning alpaca rugs? They are fairly small and do not have a "nap," as such, nor are they fur. They are more "hairy" than anything else. The dyes used are not colorfast, so I hesitate to wash them. I have tried a "soapless" lather on them without much success. As I do not particularly wish to have them cleaned commercially, I would appreciate your suggestions. K. A. C.

How about using a rug cleaning powder on them? Such absorbent powders are sold in the rug and household goods sections of several Washington department stores. Follow the directions on the container. The powder and the loosened dirt can be effectively removed afterward with a vacuum cleaner. It's a good idea to lay newspapers over the bare edges of the floor around the rugs while you clean them.

We have several pieces of pewter that are dull and ugly. We have tried to brighten them by using a number of the usual scouring powders and lotions but all to no avail. What do you suggest? I. L. H.

Harsh abrasives such as scouring powder shouldn't be used on pewter as they can injure the surface of this soft metal. It may be that yours has been damaged in this way. However, if the metal is only suffering from severe tarnish, try the following:

Apply silver polish, scrubbing it on well with a soft brush. While the polish is still wet, apply heavy lather made with mild soap. Work up a heavy lather of polish and soap all over the utensil, getting into all crevices and depressions. Rinse in hot water to which a little water softener (such as borax) has been added. Dry thoroughly. Rub to a soft polish with a flannel polishing cloth or chamois.

Usually, care of pewter need consist only of frequent washings in very hot water and soap to which ammonia has been added. It should be rinsed afterward and buffed with a soft clean cloth. Light tarnish can be removed with silver polish.

I have baked a ham in a new enameled baking pan, basting it with pineapple juice and brown sugar. The juices from the sirup and ham scorched and blackened the pan. I have soaked and scrubbed it, but cannot remove the stains. Can you tell me how to get them off? G. M.

Saturate a cloth or paper towels with household ammonia and put it on the blackened pan. Cover and leave overnight. By morning, the scorched matter should be softened sufficiently for it to be scrubbed off with scouring powder.

Can you help me in obtaining Noritake china in the Topaze pattern? I am interested in getting cups and saucers. J. M. B.

Any readers with this china to dispose of may contact J. M. B. by writing this column.

If the person who recently "asked Anne" about where to obtain trays to decorate will write to the Country Loft, 720 Main Street, Hingham, Mass., she may obtain both Queen Anne and Chippendale steel trays, unpainted. A. M. P.

I am interested in some pieces of Haviland made in France. The set was bought in 1914 and was, as far as I know, the only plain white set made by Haviland. The set has a slightly scalloped edge, with a very small raised figure at intervals along the edge. I do not know the name of the pattern. I need cups, saucers and bread and butter or dessert plates. R. A.

Can any reader help R. A. in locating pieces of this Haviland?

How shall I take care of a new mahogany dining table? We like to use doilies because we like to see the polished wood. However, furniture polish on the mahogany table we've been using made mats stick to the table and invariably left impressions of the doilies and mats, whether the dish was hot or cold. Do you recommend wax—or what? M. H. D.

Wax gives a very satisfactory finish for a dining table because it makes a hard, protective coating that guards against light blemishes and scratches and will resist heat and moisture to some extent. It shouldn't be applied more than three or four times a year or the surface of the table may become gummy. It should be buffed frequently in between.

To apply either liquid or paste wax (both make a very good finish), use a large piece of cheesecloth (about 2 yards long) wrung tightly out of water and folded into a large pad. With liquid wax, pour a small quantity of wax onto the pad and work into the surface of the cloth. With paste wax, rub the cloth over the surface of the wax in the container until you have a suitable amount. Work this into the surface of the cloth.

Rub a thin coating of the wax over the surface of the furniture with the grain of the wood, using a full arm swing. Let stand 15 to 20 minutes, then remove excess wax before you attempt polishing. Unless this is done, you will have an endless job of buffing the wax and it will be almost hopeless to get a hard, lustrous coating. To get rid of the excess wax, either turn the cloth used in applying the wax to a dry surface or use a second clean, dry cloth.

Any clean, soft cloth can be used for buffing, but a flannel one is especially satisfactory. Rub with the grain of the wood until a satiny finish is achieved. Afterward, rub the table frequently. Persistance, pressure and elbow grease are the formula for building up a handsome finish on your table.

A few years ago, the District of Columbia Fire Department and Police Department sponsored toy drives. They collected used and broken toys to repair for poor children so they could have a happy Christmas. My son will get many toys for Christmas and I'd like to do something with his old ones. Some are soiled; others are broken, but all are too good to throw away. Do you know of an organization that collects such toys and distributes them free where they are needed? M. J.

Many of the engine houses of the District Fire Department are receiving and distributing such toys this year, as they have in past years. Most of them repair the toys, too. I'd suggest calling the engine house nearest you about these toys. The Salvation Army is also interested in receiving second-hand toys and will repair and distribute them. If you telephone District 8023, a representative of the organization will pick up your contribution at your home.

The Child Day Dreamer

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There are children who do not seem to fit into the ordinary school system. Such children may be mentally incapable of learning at the same rate as the other children. An escape from any unpleasant situation is made by day-dreaming of a world in which the child is easily victorious and successful.

Mrs. B. B. B. wants to know how she shall deal with an 8-year-old daughter who is very, very slow. "She is a dreamer," she writes, "and she gets into lots of trouble at school and at home. She is very forgetful and if I did not remind her she would forget half the things she is to take to school.

"At the table she will sit and dream for an hour and a half, if I do not scold her. Then she gobbles her food down without chewing and I am afraid she will soon have indigestion.

"When I send her on an errand three or four blocks away, she gets lost, dreaming away instead of thinking what she is supposed to do. She is a big worry to me. Our boy is just the opposite and they are both physically healthy children and get the right things to eat."

You have recognized that this is not normal behavior. A child might be forgetful, but not to the extent you describe. She would be able—at some time—to enter into the school work, and the home activities with vim and vigor. It is possible if you were to have this child's intelligence measured that you would find her unable to do the work of school or remember instructions. Her dreaming is her unconscious effort to remove herself from situations which defeat her. If your school system does not supply a psychologist who can give these intelligence tests, then try to find one in connection with your nearest large college or university or a Child Guidance clinic.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Mother Is Deeply Concerned for Son, 14, Who Insists Upon Carrying Terrifically Heavy Schedule of Avocational Duties

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am deeply concerned over the terrifically heavy schedule my 14-year-old-son insists on carrying. As long as he can keep "on the go" his energy is boundless; but on those infrequent occasions when there is a lull he promptly drops on his bed and sleeps for hours.

A typical week's program for Nick includes: His regular school work, including homework in four major studies, which he does brilliantly and never neglects. Practice with one of three bands to which he belongs; at least one basketball or football game at which he plays with the school band, and occasionally other band commitments.

Also, on Saturdays, bowling in the morning, a piano lesson at noon and a paper-delivery route in the afternoon. Towards the end of each month he spends several evenings collecting from customers on the route.

In addition to these regular activities he belongs to a small symphony group which meets occasionally and now he has added a choral group on Sunday afternoons, thus disposing of his last shred of leisure.

Father Tacitly Sides With Son

Until recently he was permitted to act as "baby-sitter" for people on his paper route, which meant he wasn't abed until well after midnight; yet his father and he thought me most unreasonable to terminate that,—saying that Nick could doze on the job if he felt sleepy.

Both Nick and his father dismiss my concern for his health as "obsessive maternal solicitude,"—something of which I've never been guilty in my life. Anyway, quite aside from other considerations, it seems to me bad policy for a boy his age to keep such a pace that he never has a moment to relax and savor his experiences.

Although my husband supports my objections on principle, as a concession to my "rights as a mother," he doesn't in the least share my convictions; and as we can't agree on what might be a normal regime for a boy 14, I would like a disinterested opinion. Am I being unreasonable in the matter? C. L.

Mother's Concern Is Self-Centered

DEAR C. L.: All things considered, I find no literal justification for your terrific concern about either Nick's full schedule or his ability to maintain it. On the other hand, it occurs to me that he might voluntarily plan to spend more time at home if you were less intent on having him there.

It seems to me your agitation is strictly emotional, with possessive implications. It probably reflects acute unconscious distress that Nick seems to care so little nowadays for his mother's society and the comforts of home she yearns to share with him at leisure.

Doubtless you feel rejected by Nick, unconsciously distrait and indignant that he seems in such haste to completely sever "the silver cord,"—and without recognizing your aim or motives, are warring against this disturbing trend in vehemently protesting his growing repertory of outside interests.

Father's Views Are Objective

AS FOR his health, if he has boundless energy when "on the go," yet can relax on the instant and sleep for hours when given a chance, physically he is "in the pink," as athletes say.

From this we might infer that the busy life he leads by choice is meat-and-drink to his make-up; that a slower pace, with less to do, would be insidiously bad hygiene for him; and that his father shows really disinterested good sense and good will, in preferring not to rein him in.

In any event, I'm sure that Nick and his father are shooting close to the mark in charging you with "obsessive maternal solicitude,"—another term for possessiveness,—and my advice is to take yourself in hand and relieve your son of pressure in this respect; after which he may spontaneously develop more home-staying interests.

Food-Saving Reminders for Homemakers

Many vegetables may well "double" for bread because of their equivalent energy food value. You can serve less bread in a meal containing winter-squash, white potatoes or sweet potatoes. Reach for a second helping of beets, carrots or parsnips rather than for an extra slice of bread.

Liquids from canned or home-cooked vegetables contain important minerals and have good flavor. Try mixing them with tomato juice, also use them for thinning evaporated milk in making creamed and baked dishes; and use them to dilute condensed soups.

Put more vegetables into each meal, says the United States Children's Bureau. Most children don't get enough green and yellow vegetables. Now there is added reason for including them, for not only are they health builders but they make savings possible on other foods that are urgently needed abroad.

Chose Lapel Pins for Fashion Perfection With New, Dressy Suits

Suit and dress collars are back in the fashion picture, replacing the collarless neckline of other seasons. Beautiful lapel pins and clips are required for fashion perfection on the new softer, dressier suits. Tiny round collars on many new fashions look their best when "trimmed" with small matching pins or clips worn at each side. And of course, on tailored sports costumes, chunky gold pins and clips are excellent fashion.

On the Club Front...

As vital to a man as the money he earns at his work is the feeling that he is an appreciated part of an important organization, Howard Chase, director of public relations for General Foods, told members of the Women's Advertising Club of Washington yesterday.

Mr. Chase, who spoke at the club's bimonthly luncheon at the Hotel Washington, said that advertising plays an important part in giving employes of any organization this feeling of being needed and of being valued as an individual.

"Management has contributed to the feeling of frustration and cynicism from which men suffer today by not letting employes know how closely its aims and ideals are associated with theirs," he said. "In the machine age, men feel lonely and disassociated from the world about them and the enterprises in which they are engaged. The sense of human satisfaction and stability is lost."

As this was the club's Christmas meeting, members brought gaily wrapped gifts for boys and girls of the Children's Emergency Home. Two youngsters from the home were guests at the luncheon.

Temple Bnai Jacob to Have Chanukah Dance

The social committee of Temple B'nai Jacob, 2504 Taylor rd. se., announces a gala Chanukah dance for 9 p. m. Saturday, December 13, at the Hamilton Hotel. At this time the temple will wind up its recent building fund campaign for a new modern temple and community center in the Southeast area.

In addition to the dancing, under one of Sidney's orchestras, there will be games and general entertainment for all ages.

The dance will take place on the sixth day of Chanukah, the "feast of lights," which is the holiday that is observed by kinding of lights for a period of eight days to commemorate the rededication of the Temple of Jerusalem during the Syrian persecutions of the Jews from 168 to 165 B. C. E. In the spirit of this holiday, members and friends of the Temple B'nai Jacob Congregation are asked to take part in the festivities this Saturday evening.

Mrs. Dora Fox and Mrs. Dorothy Waghelstein are cochairmen of the affair. Other sisterhood members who will serve as hostesses are Mrs. Gertrude Wolf, president of the sisterhood; Mrs. Sylvia Kaplan, Mrs. May Frolich, Mrs. Clara Krauss, Mrs. Dora Schweitz, Mrs. Eleanor Liff, Mrs. Rose Alfandre, Mrs. Zelda Gallun, Mrs. Edith Arkin and Mrs. Margaret Lippman.

The Way of Transgressors Is Still as Hard as Ever

When The Washington Post reference library occasionally finds itself unable to answer a tough question, it resorts to a standard office joke.

That's not literally true, of course; but it is indicative of J. M. Lalley's reputation for erudition.

Lalley's friends must have been shocked, therefore, to read his letter to the editor this week.

It was an apology for a grammatical error which had appeared in our book reviewer's piece on "Hitler in Ourselves."

After spending a sleepless night of worrying, Joe wrote the apology in an attempt to appease his grammarian's conscience. But now he's beginning to wonder whether he was wise in exposing his own mistake.

In the 24 hours which followed the publication of the error, there were no repercussions. But as soon as the letter of apology appeared in print, Joe's phone started to ring.

His callers wanted to know all about the mistake—which they'd failed to catch in the original article.

BIRTHDAY WISH

Conrad (Old Man) Reid of 6703 Connecticut ave. nw., has a comment to make about The Washington Post's recently celebrated 70th birthday anniversary. He says:

"I celebrated my sixty-sixth on the same day—and I hope your circulation is as good as mine."

BY THE WAY—

If you have some extra Christmas tree decorations that you can spare, I know where you can put them to good use.

Immediately to the right, as you enter the W st. door of Children's Hospital, you'll find the campaign office. Ask for Mrs. Peyton Hawes Dunn. She's trying to help the children arrange a proper welcome for Santa.

NICKELODEON, 1947 STYLE

Some of our enterprising citizens have hit on a novel scheme for making a little pocket money.

There was a brisk business on the Louis-Walcott fight, at $1 per head. Programs of lesser interest command proportionately lower fees.

This, of course, raises the question of whether such exhibitions are public or private, and whether the Government is entitled to the usual taxes which are levied against similar, but larger, commercial ventures.

It also raises the question of why anybody would pay a dollar to see something he could view for no greater consideration than the purchase of a 10-cent glass of beer.

FOR WHOM THE GATE TOLLS

My inability to find Double Toll Gate, Va., on a map brings the usual response from our all-knowing District Liners.

John S. Stultz of 502 Quintana pl. nw., advises that it is located at the intersection of Routes 522 and 277, approximately 10 miles south of Winchester.

George T. Smith of 3999 Alabama ave. se., calls it 9 miles instead of 10, and he ought to know. He's a cab driver.

Some additional information comes from Arthur Gibson of Nain, Va. (You won't find that one on the map either—it's about 4½ miles northwest of Winchester on Route 522).

Alfred R. James of 600 20th st. nw. adds that the area is "very historic, and well known to tourists, and students of Stonewall Jackson's Valley Campaigns."

Jean C. Minter of Front Royal, Va., is surprised to learn that I couldn't locate Double Toll Gate on a map, and wonders how I "can be so dumb about some things." (I guess I've got a knack for it, Mister Bergen).

A. O. Martin of 2517 Mozart pl. nw, questions our spelling of the name, and says that his 1947 Rand-McNally calls it "Double Tollgate."

A. C. Machir of Front Royal, Va., submits a map of Skyline Drive which (in very small type) seems to substantiate the point. And my Webster also lists "tollgate" as one word.

But J. B. Jordan of Bridgewater, Va., brings us right back to the spelling used by the majority, and Connie McElhinney of Four Winds, Alexandria, Va., also writes it "Double Toll Gate," and explains that up to comparatively recent times, there were two tollgates (or toll gates) at the spot.

But the intersection of the two heavily traveled highways now exacts a toll of a different kind.

And Connie contributes to our historic lore by pointing out that Double Toll Gate is on the road to White Post, Va. (Many long years ago Lord Fairfax placed a white post at this spot, as a guide to his estate, Greenway Court.)

Gilbert Davidson of 118 Woodland dr., Fairfax, Va., adds that in this same area you'll find the towns of Relief and Reliance—his two favorite place names.

And just in case all this whets your curiosity sufficiently to make you want to visit these historic spots, Elizabeth Daggit of 1100 Janneys lane, Alexandria, Va., tells us how to get there.

From either Winchester or Front Royal there are four Virginia Trailways buses daily to Double Toll Gate.

And Mrs. E. S. Pearson of Linden, Va., warns that if you make the trip in your own car, you'd better be careful—or you'll drive right through Double Toll Gate and never know you were there.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—At the Friars luncheon to Frank Sinatra, Solly Violinsky boasted that he worked less than any other vaudevillian. "I laid off under four Presidents," he boasted, "including a four-termer." When someone suggested that Al Lackey, former husband of Sophie Tucker, also was a non-worker, Violinsky scoffed: "Compared to me, Lackey is a slave."

Silliman Evans ordered 150 copies of Roger Butterfield's "The American Past," the book which is a bargin at $10 a copy. "I usually give hams or turkeys to my friends on Christmas," Evans wrote. "This year I'm giving 5 pounds of American history."

Butterfield, incidentally, wrote most of the book at his ancestral home, the White House at Hartwick, N. Y., built by Capt. James Butterfield in 1792. It is eight years older than the White House in Washington.

One of the first tenants in the Waldorf Towers was a family named Miller, occupying an $18,000 a year suite. Their young son would come down each night to the room where Xavier Cugat's band was playing. Cugat often would permit him to roll the drums or play some of the other instruments. He studied and practiced music indefatigably . . . Four years ago his father died and Bobby Miller inherited his wealth, including investments in the major film companies. And now at last he's fulfilled his ambition: He's the new marimba player in Cugat's orchestra.

When Dean Alfange was asked what he thought of Russia's vote supporting Palestine partition he said: "For its action on Palestine, I respect and suspect the Russians."

Jean Mursu, who holds a B.A. degree in languages and a master's degree in psychology, gave up her teaching job at P.S. 33 in Manhattan to become a folksinger at the Village Vanguard this week.

Joey Adams, the nightclub comic and author of "From Gags to Riches," has received complaints from businessmen that whenever they try to cash his checks the bank gives them copies of his book instead of money.

Alexander Ince tells of the psychoanalyst he knew years ago in Vienna, and who received a postcard from a vacationing patient: "Having wonderful time. Wish you were here to tell me why."

The raw material and labor costs in the garment industry are so high that a lamenting manufacturer at Lindy's told a job applicant: "I can't start you as a salesman," the employer told him. "In these days I've got to start you at the bottom, as a partner."

Cabinet No Rubber Stamp

By Drew Pearson

It used to be said that the Roosevelt Cabinet served only as a rubber stamp for the President; that it seldom debated important questions. Whether true or not, the Truman Cabinet has become just the opposite, with the President giving his cabineteers ample time to sound off.

Clifford

For several days prior to the message to Congress, a tug-of-war took place between Leon Keyserling of the Economic Council and White House Counselor Clark Clifford on one side, with two Cabinet members—Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson and Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman—on the other. The two Cabinet members were dead set against Government price controls; the two White House advisers were for them.

The arguments finally came to a head at the last full Cabinet meeting before Congress convened.

Board of Cabinet Censors

At 10 a. m. Sunday, Attorney General Tom Clark, Acting Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman, Clark Clifford, Assistant to the President John Steelman, together with Secretary of Commerce Harriman and Secretary of Agriculture Anderson all gathered in the Cabinet room.

They remained there for four hours—until 2:05 p. m.—hashing over almost every semicolon in the message to Congress.

Patient President

Truman opened the meeting.

"Now we're going to read it through a second time, page-by-page, and you can make suggestions."

He read the whole speech without interruption. Then he started through it again. Beginning with the second page, the suggestions began to pour in, chiefly from Averell Harriman, with Anderson backing him up.

Some of the Harriman points were well-taken and accepted without argument. Clifford took over the chief job of refuting Harriman and did a good job of it. Few of the others backed Clifford up.

Finally, after softening this sentence and that, the Cabinet group reached the most important paragraph of all—that which asked Congress to vote price controls. A new commodity—steel—had been added.

Though critical of the steel industry, Harriman contended that he could get the steel moguls to accept voluntary controls. He proposed that this paragraph be lifted in toto out of the speech.

'Me-Tooing' Taft

Clark Clifford disagreed. The meeting deadlocked. The President stepped out of the room. When he came back, Acting Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman picked up a copy of The Washington Post, marked it with a pencil and handed it to Truman.

"I just happened to read Mr. Taft's statement on inflation, Mr. President," he said, "and it looks to me that if you take that paragraph on price control out of your speech, you'll be accused of simply me-tooing Senator Taft. Otherwise, his proposals are much the same as yours."

"That's right," Truman agreed. That ended the debate. The President stuck by his original position. The paragraph on price controls remained in his message to Congress.

Later, Secretary Harriman, as the man in closest touch with business and on the theory that the Cabinet operates as a team once a decision is taken, was given the job of defending the controls which he did not want during hearings before Congress.

Merry-Go-Round

Robert Young, head of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, has vetoed the request of Rhode Island Republicans that he run for the Senate against Democratic Senator Francis Green. Green is too tough to defeat.

Senators Aiken of Vermont and Kilgore of West Virginia are demanding legislation to control whisky distillers by law rather than voluntary agreement.

President Truman has asked the Council of Economic Advisers to draw up the following things: (1) a long-range study of the prospects for continued prosperity; (2) a program for the increase of social security; (3) stabilized wages and price controls to guarantee the continued productivity of American agriculture. Truman has asked that these studies be completed by January 1, when the White House will send them to Congress.

Correction

Barbara Hankey

Through an error, The Washington Post yesterday failed to identify the little girl named Barbara, whose picture appeared in a story on Anthony J. Hankey, jr., who recently returned from China after two years there.

Barbara is the 15-month-old granddaughter of Hankey, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Hall, 705 18th st. nw. Hankey had told The Washington Post that seeing Barbara for the first time was one of the greatest thrills of his life. Hankey was twice shipwrecked while in the Orient, both times off the coast of Formosa. He was an employe of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.
